Minority gets voice in merger decision

When two companies, one of which has voting control over the other, decide to amalgamate, minority shareholders seldom if ever get a meaningful voice in the proceedings, short of going to court.

Such a state of corporate affairs, however, gets a unique twist next Thursday in Vancouver. Minority shareholders of Sun Publishing Co. Ltd. will get to decide if that company's proposed amalgamation with F.P. Publications (Western) Ltd. will take place. It likely is the first time that such a procedure has been tried in Canada. (See Page 7.)

Fish unions back on job

VANCOUVER (CP) — A strike that virtually shut down the B.C. fishing industry ended Wednesday when shoreworkers and tendermen voted in favor of a contract offer from the Fisheries Association of B.C.

The workers, members of the United Fishermen and Allied Workers Union, began returning to their jobs immediately.

The 600 tendermen had walked off the job Sunday after rejecting an offer put forward by industry negotiators just prior to a strike deadline. The 4,500 shoreworkers walked out in support of the tendermen.

Fishermen, the third major group represented by the UFAWU, had already accepted minimum salmon prices set by the industry, but were asked last Friday to stop fishing in support of strike action. All fish caught after midnight Friday night were declared "hot" and were not to be processed.

Union negotiators had recommended that the membership accept the latest offer, reached after a lengthy bargaining session that ended early Wednesday morning.

Negotiators had also recommended acceptance of the offer turned down Sunday, primarily because the union was upset with the companies' demand that a single agreement cover tendermen for both the salmon and herring seasons.

Nichol said that issue was resolved when the union agreed that it would not take strike action during the 1979 herring season, at the same time maintaining its right to raise issues relating to conditions in the herring industry.

Any disputes, he said, are to be considered by a joint union-industry committee with any issues unresolved to go to third-party arbitration.

"That basically allows them (tendermen) a second kick at the can," said Nichol. "The companies had wanted to close off that opportunity altogether."

Nichol said the union's desire for separate agreements arises from the difference in conditions for tendermen between the summer salmon season and the winter herring season. Tendermen convey fish between fish boats and processing plants.

Nichol said the tendermen will receive a $9-a-day increase on a basic rate of $103 a day.

He said shoreworkers accepted the companies' offer of a 70-cent-an-hour increase. Under the previous agreement, shoreworkers received $6.72 an hour at base, $7.27 for production workers, $7.59 in cold storage plants and $8.89 for tradesmen.

Bolivia orders voting rerun

LA PAZ, Bolivia (AP) — The National Election Court annulled Bolivia's July 9 presidential election Wednesday night and called for another vote within 180 days.

The court secretary read the decision to reporters while President Hugo Banzer and his cabinet met in the presidential palace. He said the court acted unanimously in reaction "to irregularities all along the process" that was intended to restore civilian government after a dozen years of military rule.

The secretary said the court felt new elections would guarantee an expression of the "popular will."

Gen. Juan Pereda, the military government's hand-picked candidate who was declared the winner of the presidential election, asked the court earlier Wednesday to scrap the results and hold another vote "to avoid sorrow and tears for the nation."

Several opposition candidates already have charged that the military rulers rigged the elections.

Pereda called on God to "save Bolivia from hatred and violence," and said he was sure his proposal would have the full support of the people. Pereda, a former air force commander and interior minister, was declared the winner last week of Bolivia's first presidential election in 12 years. He had 50.13 per cent of the vote—with about 70 per cent counted—when the electoral court stopped giving out results last weekend.

Riot-helmeted armed police watch colleagues chop bails into bite size for incinerator

Closely-watched pot broils away

Members of the RCMP's Emergency Response Team from Victoria, armed with 12-gauge shotguns and semi-automatic rifles, stood guard Wednesday while a huge haul of marijuana was burned in the North Cowichan municipal incincerator.

The marijuana was the 13 tons seized off Tofino earlier this week in a combined police-armed forces operation.

The haul, largest in Canada's history and estimated to be worth $20.8 million, according to RCMP, was burned in the incinerator about three miles northwest of Duncan.

Altogether it took about two hours to burn the confiscated drug, which had to be fed into the incinerator in stages.

About 20 Mounties from Victoria unloaded the packages of marijuana which almost completely filled a tractor-trailer unit.

The Mountie detail was commanded by Victoria Supt. Edward Trefry with S-Sgt. Edward Nedzelski, also of Victoria, as second in command.

The marijuana had been stored at CFB Esquimalt since its seizure Saturday morning.

The seizure of the drug and two vessels took place at Shelter Inlet northwest of Tofino.

Each of the bales burned contained about 60 pounds of marijuana. Two bales were spared from the furnace for use as evidence.

Nedzelski said the North Cowichan incinerator site was chosen because the incinerator is the largest on Vancouver Island. There was little visible smoke from the destruction operation.

Meanwhile, RCMP Supt. Scotty Gardiner denied reports Wednesday that some of the 15 men arrested in the marijuana seizure have been

Language deals for Quebec HQs called ludicrous

MONTREAL (CP) — Companies whose head offices for all of Canada are based in Quebec will be allowed to use English as their working language provided they sign special agreements with the Quebec government, regulations released Wednesday say.

All companies which conduct at least 50 per cent of their business outside Quebec will be eligible for special agreements. Firms with less than 50 per cent of their business outside Quebec are also eligible if they meet certain specified conditions.

Reg Groome, head of the Montreal Board of Trade, reacted angrily Wednesday to the regulations.

In a telephone interview, Groome said it was "naive" and "ludicrous" for the government to expect it could control what language people would do business in.

Groome said the regulations amounted to having companies ask for permission to use English, and would ultimately lead to the departure of more head offices from Montreal.

"You cannot regulate head offices," he said.

"A head office is not a local business and cannot be treated in the same manner. It is flexible in that it can be located anywhere."

Groome said the rules would force businesses that do less than 50 per cent of their business outside the

SMOKE ALARM SHORT CIRCUIT STARTS BLAZE

UPPERCO, Md. (UPI) — Maryland fire authorities said Wednesday a fire in an Upperco home was started by a short circuit in the smoke detector.

"Nobody can believe us when we tell them it happened," said Jane Sievert, whose detector started the small fire on the second floor of her house. "A smoke detector catching fire is like having a fire in an engine house."

Mrs. Sivert said her husband extinguished the fire before any serious damage was caused.

The faulty detectors have been the object of a recall drive by their manufacturer, BRK Electronics of Aurora, Ill., but only slightly more than one-third have been returned.

John Farrell of the state fire marshal's office said the faulty smoke detector had been installed with the "wrong size resistors, which could cause smoke to build up in them."

BRK Electronics said the resistor problem in its 749-series detectors could not only make the devices "inoperative but could cause a fire."

Whites jeer Smith: 'How many to die?'

SALISBURY, Rhodesia (AP) — An all-white audience booed and heckled Prime Minister Ian Smith on Wednesday night when he said he agreed to bring blacks into the government because it was the best deal that could be expected after six years of guerrilla war.

"Rubbish!" some members of the audience shouted. "How many more have to die?" others yelled.

In an interview earlier Wednesday with the South African Press Association, the prime minister urged the United States to lift economic sanctions against Rhodesia as a first step toward ending the guerrilla war.

Smith, who jointly heads a transition government with three black leaders, has promised black majority rule by the beginning of the year. A constitutional accord reached four months ago between black and white leaders guarantees the country's first popular elections in the next few months. But it excluded Patriotic Front guerrilla leaders Joshua Nkomo and Robert Mugabe, who

Mideast talks fizzle, Vance to try again

Colonist news services

MAIDSTONE, England — U.S. State Secretary Cyrus Vance announced Wednesday he will fly to the Middle East in about two weeks in another bid to revive Egyptian-Israeli peace talks after the two sides ended an inconclusive meeting here.

Vance came here hoping Egyptian Foreign Minister Mohammed Ibrahim Kamel and his Israeli counterpart Moshe Dayan could agree on the date and place for a resumption of peace negotiations, broken off by President Anwar Sadat last January after he accused Israel of intransigence.

But two days of talks in ancient Leeds Castle ended Wednesday with no firm agreement on the time or place of future negotiations, and an acknowledgment that major differences still existed between the two sides.

"I anticipate there will be further meetings when I go to the Middle East in about two weeks," Vance told newsmen in a statement, but admitted that a lot of hard work lay ahead.

Kamel was quoted by the semi-official daily newspaper Al-Ahram today as saying Egypt had agreed to resume Middle East peace negotiations after Israel undertook to reconsider Egyptian proposals it had already rejected.

In Jerusalem, Prime Minister Menachem Begin tore up a sheet of paper during an angry parliamentary debate today in a gesture of contempt for the idea of any Israeli withdrawal from the Jordan West Bank.

Waving the paper at Opposition leader Shimon Peres, Begin declared: "Now this is a territorial compromise, one part for you and one part for me. Excuse me."

With that, Begin ripped the paper in two, sending the Knesset into an uproar that lasted nearly 15 minutes.

Meantime, special U.S. envoy Alfred Atherton has been instructed to resume shuttle diplomacy to prepare for further taiks.

Vance said he would remain in the Middle East long enough to get talks restarted.

Filed delinquency charge

Vander Zalm critic sacked

VANDERHOOF (CP) — The co-ordinator of an independent community resources society in this central B.C. community was fired Wednesday after he filed charges in provincial court Tuesday that Human Resources Minister William Vander Zalm contributed to juvenile delinquency.

Ed Yorke said he was informed of his dismissal Wednesday after directors of the society met Tuesday night to discuss the case.

Yorke filed charges against Vander Zalm and several others for failing to remove six children from an environment which he said promoted juvenile delinquency.

Yorke said his firing came under threat from the human resources ministry that the society's funding would be cut if he remained in his position.

The society provides special services, including family child care workers, to children and their families.

Both the director and vice-president of the society refused to comment on the firing.

Greeks flee quake city in full moon

SALONICA, Greece (Reuter) — Most of this city's 700,000 residents fled the city Wednesday in fear of an earthquake during tonight's full moon.

A strong tremor in Salonica a month ago—on the eve of a full moon—killed 50 people, injured many others and caused severe damage.

Despite assurances from seismologists that a full moon could have no connection with quakes, the rumor has persisted over the past few days.

Carter drug-abuse adviser admits falsifying prescription

WASHINGTON (AP) — Dr. Peter Bourne, who heads President Carter's fight against drug abuse, was granted a leave of absence Wednesday night after it was learned he wrote a prescription for a controlled drug made out to a fictitious person.

The leave was announced by Carter's spokesman, Jody Powell, after a day of White House delay in reacting to the disclosure that police were investigating the case.

Powell said Bourne requested the leave "to have an opportunity to clear his name."

"This decision was Dr. Bourne's own decision," Powell said. "The president was informed after he had made that decision and, of course, agreed to his request to leave."

Bourne conceded in a statement that he wrote a prescription made out to a fictitious person in order to supply a staff aide with 15 tablets of the much-abused sedative Quaalude.

He said he consulted a lawyer and believes "that what I have done is neither legally nor morally wrong."

Powell said he assumes that Bourne will remain on the White House payroll while on leave.

The situation first came to light in an article published in The Washington Post which said Bourne had written the prescription for Quaalude.

Quaalude is a brand name used by Rogers Inc. for the drug having the chemical name methaqualone. It also is marketed under different names by other firms. Quaalude is classified as a sedative and hypnotic substance, similar in effect but not in chemistry to barbituates. It has been tightly controlled by the federal government since October, 1973, because of widespread abuse.

A spokesman for the U.S. Drug Enforcement Administration said methaqualone is prescribed medically to induce sleep in cases of severe insomnia but is sought by drug abusers for its alleged aphrodisiac effect, as well as its sedative effect.

A court clerk confirmed Wednesday that Toby M. Long of Washington was charged July 11 with "obtaining or attempting to obtain a controlled drug known as Quaalude by fraud, deceit or misrepresentation." Trial has been set for Sept. 19.

The Post said police were treating the arrest as a routine investigation of prescription forgery, a crime that covers any prescription misrepresentation and carries a penalty of one to five years' imprisonment under Virginia law.

The Post said Bourne told investigators the person seeking the drug was a woman who worked in his White House office, but she was not further identified.

Bourne, 38, a psychiatrist by profession, worked as Carter's chief drug-abuse adviser while Carter was governor of Georgia. He now holds a $51,000-a-year job as the president's chief adviser on medical and drug-abuse matters.

Language deals on HQs 'ludicrous' province to pack up and leave, even though the regulations say special arrangements can be made for these companies as well.

The regulations form part of the controversial language laws arising from Bill 101, approved last year by the Quebec national assembly.

They were drafted by Cultural Development Minister Camille Laurin in consultation with a panel of business leaders. Laurin, who has scheduled a news conference on the subject for today, has previously described the regulations as generous and comprehensive.

The agreements are to include provisions for the use of French by head offices in dealings with Quebec clients, suppliers, shareholders and other members of the Quebec public, as well as with head office staff and staff at all Quebec branches.

The regulations for firms with Canadian or world head offices in Quebec are more lenient than those covering businesses with head offices elsewhere or those doing most of their business in Quebec. Other firms must meet stringent rules regarding the use of French.

Sun Life Assurance Co. and other firms have in the past expressed fears about the content of the regulations, citing that as a reason for decisions to move their head offices or some of their operations outside Quebec.

It was not immediately clear when the regulations come into effect, and government officials were unavailable to clarify the situation. One section of the text, obtained from the government's Office de la Langue Francaise, indicated they did not come into effect for at least 60 days to allow time for comments and possible modification, while another section appeared to indicate they came into effect immediately.

To obtain special agreements, firms must spell out what arrangements they intend to make to use French on signs and posters inside the head office, to increase the number of French-speaking staff, to use French terminology, and to adopt hiring and promotion policies suited to the use of French.

Determination of the proportion of business done outside Quebec is to be based on gross income during the three years before the request for a special agreement, or for a shorter period for head offices established less than three years before.

Companies doing more than 50 per cent of their business in Quebec can obtain agreements if they conduct frequent business outside Quebec, use complex technology, require specially-trained staff or fear "the effect that application of a head-office francization program might have on its competitive position."

Smith jeered over mixed regime have vowed their externally-based forces will step up the war.

"We are fighting for our lives, for our very existence," Smith told the restive audience of about 300 in an affluent suburb. He said it was incredible for some Rhodesians to believe the country couldlive in isolation from the rest of the world.

That remark also drew catcalls and comments from the audience, and Smith appeared rankled when someone reminded him he once said "never in a thousand years" would blacks rule Rhodesia.

"It's all very well to shout," Smith said, "but what is the alternative?"

Smith unilaterally declared Rhodesia independent from Britain in 1965 to head off black rule.

His call to lift economic sanctions came in the face of a new bid to get U.S. Senate approval for a six-month moratorium on sanctions against the central African country.

U.S. Senator Jesse Helms has proposed an amendment for Senate consideration this week to temporarily lift sanctions after a similar proposal in June failed by 48 votes to 42.

In the Zambian capital of Lusaka, the guerrilla-backed Patriotic Front nationalist movement said the United States would be declaring its hostility to the liberation struggle if it ended sanctions.

Meanwhile, the U.S. state department in Washington declared that such a move would damage U.S. relations with other African states and also "undermine" its credibility as a negotiator for peace between the bi-racial Salisbury government and the guerrillas.

Smith, who jointly heads a transiton government with black leaders, has promised black majority rule by the beginning of next year. A constitutional accord reached four months ago between black and white leaders guarantees the country's first popular elections in the next few months. But it excluded guerrilla leaders Joshua Nkomo and Roert Mugabe who have pledged to step up the war.

Smith said in the interview that the lifting of sanctions would cause the Patriotic Front to drop its militant posturing.

He also described as "incomprehensible" the refusal of Britain and the United States to support or encourage the transition government which he said was trying to preserve Rhodesia as a democratic and pro-Western country.

The United Nations ordered sanctions against Rhodesia after the previous white minority government unilaterally declared its independence from Britain in 1965.

CONTAINER SHIPS COLLIDE IN PACIFIC

KODIAK, Alaska (AP) — Two container ships collided in the Pacific Ocean about 1,000 kilometres south of here early Wednesday, the Coast Guard in Juneau said.

There were no immediate reports of injuries or damage, and a U.S. Coast Guard cutter was en route to the scene, a spokesman said.

The collision reportedly involved the 560-foot Star K and the 592-foot Taiwan Phoenix.

Brezhnev, aides skip funeral for colleague

MOSCOW (Reuter) — President Leonid Brezhnev and other senior members of the Soviet Union's ruling Politburo were unexpectedly absent today from the Red Square funeral of their colleague Fyodor Kulakov.

The funeral oration, broadcast on television, was delivered by Politburo member Andrei Kirilenko, who was flanked on top of Lenin's Tomb by Foreign Minister Andrei Gromyko and KGB security police chief Yuri Andropov.

Kulakov, who died on Monday of a heart attack, was once considered a possible successor to Brezhnev.

But neither Brezhnev, nor the two men who rank close behind him in the Kremlin leadership—Prime Minister Alexei Kosygin and ideological chief Mikhail Suslov—were present.

Western diplomats said it was extremely unusual for them to miss an occasion of this type and could offer no ready explanation.

It was possible that Brezhnev was already on holiday on the Black Sea coast where he usually spends his summer vacation.

A military band played Chopin's Funeral March as Kirilenko placed an urn containing the ashes of his colleague in a niche in the Kremlin Wall, next to scientist Mstislav Keldysh who died last month.

The ashes were brought in a procession through Moscow's main streets, lined with soldiers, and followed by six Politburo members, close relatives and friends.

Libya rejects hijack pact

NEW DELHI, India (AP) — Libya will reject the Bonn anti-hijacking agreement because it does not exclude air piracy committed in the name of national liberation, a Tripoli government spokesman said Wednesday. Maj. Abdul Jalloud said Libya would support UN sanctions against hijacking on the condition that liberation struggles are not considered terrorist.

Bells tolling in unison today for Johnstown flood victims

JOHNSTOWN, Pa. (UPI) — The bells of Johnstown's churches will toll in unison Thursday noon to honor the 77 victims of the disastrous flood one year ago.

Mayor Charles Tomjanlovic has declared Thursday a day of prayer and asked residents to remember those who died and those who suffered when the flash flood hit Johnstown and an eight-county surrounding area in the early morning hours of July 20, 1977.

Millions of dollars of federal and state funds pouring into the area have alleviated the more obvious physical scars of battered roads, uprooted trees, houses and cars tossed about by rampaging water.

But the area's economic future is shaky. Even though the rebuilding of houses and businesses and shattered lives still goes on, the fear that it could happen again surfaces during every severe rainstorm.

The major commemorative service begins at 10:30 a.m. today at Greater Johnstown High School in the downtown section, flooded by as much as eight feet of water in the torrential 11.82 inches of rain.

transported to Newfoundland.

The rumors surfaced because the RCMP confirmed earlier that two officers from St. John's, Nfld., were in Victoria to investigate a possible tie-in with a 1974 marijuana bust under similar circumstances in which $4 million worth of marijuana was found stashed in caves in an isolated coastal cove in Newfoundland.

Gardiner said the two east coast police officers were still here—they were expected to stay three days—but that none of the 15 captured in the police-armed forces operation off the west coast of Vancouver Island had been taken anywhere.

However, Gardiner said that at least two men have been positively identified as being involved in the 1974 incident in Newfoundland. But none of the accused men will be moved anywhere, Gardiner insisted, until the current charges are disposed of.

There was a possiblity, Gardiner said, that one of the men may be taken back to clear up some outstanding charges in the east if there is a lengthy period during which he isn't required in court. One man is reported to be wanted on a Canada-wide warrent for skipping out on $350,000 bail.

Meanwhile, the RCMP is still searching waters off the west coast of Vancouver Island for a third boat which apparently slipped away in fog at dawn Saturday when the police swooped in to make their arrests.

The boat, the fishing vessel Sunfish, is registered in Vancouver to 33-year-old Robert Sherman Miller, one of the 15 charged with conspiracy to import marijuana into Canada. The vessel Weatherly, which was boarded along with the Toernyn during the early-morning police raid, also belongs to Miller.

U.S. mail talks snagged

WASHINGTON (AP) — Contract talks aimed at heading off a possible strike by postal workers remained snagged Wednesday on the question of layoffs, with bargainers reported refusing to bend on the issue.

"They just ran into a logjam," said one source close to the negotiations between the postal service and three unions representing more than 500,000 workers.

Federal mediators have been attempting to find a compromise so a settlement can be forged by midnight tonight, when the current three-year agreement expires.

Issues were reported to include job security, wages and work rule changes.

Postal strikes are prohibited by federal law, but some local union leaders have threatened to call their members off the job if an agreement is not reached by tonight's deadline.

Congressmen split on Soviet reprisal

WASHINGTON (Reuter) — President Carter's decision to block a computer sale and restrict sales of oil technology to the Soviet Union in reprisal for the trials of dissidents drew a mixed reaction Wednesday.

Some U.S. congressmen supported the President's decision, others said it was the wrong move and Commerce Secretary Juanita Kreps announced she opposed it.

The commerce department and congressmen who talked with Carter disclosed that he had cancelled the sale of a computer to the official Soviet news agency Tass as a signal of U.S. concern over the dissidents' trials.

He also placed all American exports of oil technology to the Soviet Union under White House control.

It was not clear immediately if he intended to cancel a $144-million deal negotiated by Dresser Industries of Dallas, Texas, to sell the Russians a modern plant for producing oil-well drilling bits.

Senator Henry Jackson (Dem. Wash.) applauded the decision, taken a few days after dissidents Anatoly Shcharansky and Alexander Ginzburg were sentenced to long prison terms.

Senator Frank Church (Dem. Idaho) said: "Everyone feels that the trials of the dissidents are an outrage. But I must say I have my doubts that you can prick the paw of the Russian bear and convert it into a lamb.

"The best leverage we have is the moral force that can be brought to bear by the expressed indignation by free peoples everywhere. I doubt very much that direct action in the form of reprisals can be effective."

Senator John Sparkman, chairman of the Senate foreign relations committee, said after the White House meeting that he would not have ordered trade reprisals.

Carter did not order an outright ban on the export of oil technology to the Soviet Union but tightened controls by ruling that each item must be cleared by the National Security Council after the commerce department has made its regular review of the proposed sale.

In Moscow, the Soviet Union said Wednesday that pressure on the Kremlin in trade or other areas is not in the interest of the United States and would lead to a "path of confrontation."

The article was carried in the government newspaper Izvestia.

It said leaders in Washington apparently have not learned the lesson of Cold War days when a trade and economic embargo imposed on the Soviet Union and other socialist countries failed to hurt the Eastern bloc's economies.

"Instead, they inflicted blows on business interests in the United States and other Western countries who were subordinate to the dictates of Washington," Izvestia said.

Pat's feeling good now

Actor Pat O'Brien with his wife Eloise at his side makes a fist and says, "I'm feeling good," as they were to leave Riverside Hospital in Columbus, Ohio, Wednesday. The 78-year-old actor, who wears a heart pacemaker became ill Saturday night while performing in The Second Time Around here. Faulty battery was replaced.

LAOS BACKS VIETNAM

BANGKOK, Thailand (UPI) — Laos has ended its neutrality and pledged its "full support" for neighboring Vietnam in Hanoi's worsening conflicts with China and Cambodia.

"We express our deep sympathy with and full support for the correct stand and attitude of the Vietnamese government who ... are persevering in solving current complicated and difficult problems through negotiations ...," said the government newspaper Voice of the People.

Despite close ties with Vietnam, Laos had long refrained from taking sides in Vietnam's bitter dispute with China or its bloody border war with Cambodia.

Referring to Cambodia and China as "international reactionary forces"—the same phrase used by Vietnam—the editorial said: "It is a fact that their ambition has no limit and their actions are extremely barbarous. But it is also clear that their capacities are limited."

Baby tests 'unethical'

NEW YORK (UPI) — Raymond Vande Wiele, the doctor who stopped a test tube baby experiment here five years ago, said in a statement submitted in court Wednesday that he did so for ethical reasons and had the test tube put in the "deep freeze" for future research.

The contentions were made by Vande Wiele in a statement made in December 1975 and read in U.S. District Court in Manhattan Wednesday at his trial on charges he "maliciously and arbitrarily" destroyed the sperm and eggs of Dr. and Mrs. John Del Zio of Fort Lauderdale, Fla.

Dr. Vande Wiele also said he believed the two doctors involved in the experiment, which if successful would have produced the world's first test tube baby, were not qualified to see it through.

The Del Zios are seeking $1.5 million in damages from Columbia Presbyterian Medical Centre and Vande Wiele, a graduate of Catholic University Medical School in Louvain, Belgium, who is the centre's chief of obstetrics and gynecology.

Vande Wiele said he learned of the experiment in September 1973 just two days before the culture was to be implanted in the womb of Mrs. Del Rio, who was a patient at New York Hospital.

After consulting with his superiors, he said, he ordered the test tube brought to him from the laboratory incubator because he considered the experiment unethical and in violation of the hospital's human experiment regulations.

The test tube was on his desk for about two hours, the physician said, before "I had it put in the deep freeze to preserve it as a document" " at the Columbia University Medical School, where it remains to this day.

"I wasn't going to throw this away because this was an important procedure that was carried out and I wanted to preserve it," he said.

Earlier Wednesday, Mrs. Doris Del Zio appeared near exhaustion when she completed her testimony.

● In Oldham, England, 32-year-old Lesley Brown, who is expecting what British medical authorities call the world's first test tube baby, was reported to be in good health Wednesday. But there was no word of a date for the baby's birth.

Anti-abortionist gets life in jail

LONDON (AP) — A science student who opposed abortion was given six life sentences at London's Old Bailey criminal court Wednesday for a one-man firebomb campaign he waged "to purge the land of evil."

Thomas Lascelles, 18, "took the view that those who support abortion are wrong," declared the Recorder of London, James Miskin.

"He made lethal and beautifully designed bombs which, by the grace of God, did not kill anyone," Miskin said. "He has exhibited no remorse or any concern for his intended victims."

Lascelles, guarded in the dock by police officers, pleaded guilty to four counts of arson, mailing a parcel bomb to a woman advocate of abortion and planting a bomb filled with shards of glass outside a charity institution. He also confessed to six other arson offences.

Tighter reins for Young?

WASHINGTON (UPI) — President Carter's chief spokesman hinted Wednesday UN Ambassador Andrew Young may have to clear his future public statements with the White House.

Press secretary Jody Powell also said "I'm not aware that anyone is fireproof in this administration," when asked about a columnist's comment that Carter could not sack Young because his "black constituency would crumble."

Questioned about Young's latest interview statement he would continue to speak out on issues "that I believe in," Powell appeared to signal tighter White House control over the ambassador.

Young would continue to speak out on human rights, Powell said "but how and when is a matter that has to be discussed."

Powell, asked if it meant Young would be subject to administration clearance of future statements, answered, "I think what we said speaks for itself."

Young's interview with a Paris newspaper, in which he said there are "hundreds, maybe even thousands ... of political prisoners" in the United States caused widespread controversy.

Skylab back in control

SPACE CENTRE, Houston (AP) — After several narrow misses, scientists at Johnson Space Centre on Wednesday regained control of the Skylab spacecraft, which had been wobbling out of control since July 8.

Controllers finally caught the unpredictable, 85-ton space lab in a favorable position as it passed over a tracking station in Bermuda. They sent a radio signal that turned the craft's stabilizing gyroscopes back on and directed it to hold that position, with its solar panels all facing the sun.

Montreal encore in 1984?

A SHUDDER of horror must have wracked many Canadians at the suggestion Montreal again stage the Olympic Games, in 1984.

The public memory is short, it's true. But that short?

With Los Angeles unwilling to offer the sort of financial guarantee the International Olympic Committee insists upon, a news report was quick to advise the world that both Montreal and Munich are interested.

Iona Campognolo, Canada's secretary of state, has responded by saying the idea is immoral. Morality apart, it's madness.

Hosting the Olympics these days is an exercise in masochism. Only a community of robots led by coterie of egomaniacs would consider doing it twice in a generation.

First, there is the staggering cost of providing not just the ultimate in facilities but innumerable services too. Don't think for a moment all those ancient structures in Montreal from 1976 would be good enough in 1984. That's not in the Olympic spirit of "swifter, higher, stronger."

Along with a new grand design would come the waste, not to mention the potential for graft and payoffs, also on an olympic scale. All of it at taxpayers' expense, at a time when taxpayers are in revolt.

Have we forgotten already the seemingly inevitable political hassles — which nations are ineligible — which will decline to attend at the last moment? No government can win, no matter what its decisions.

Then there are the terrorists, hungry for a world stage like the Olympic Games to conduct their mad enterprises. It takes our army to keep them out.

Some day the Olympic Games will be conducted at magnificent permanent facilities in Greece, where they belong. Until then, let the world share the trauma of hosting them. Canada has had its turn — and is still paying.

About that crowd at the station

THERE IS A LEGACY of bitterness in this community toward CP Rail for the manner in which it has operated the Dayliner service in recent years.

If anyone still wonders why, a look at what is happening on the Dayliner's run between Victoria and Courtenay right now should help explain it.

VIA Rail, the new federal agency established to operate all rail passenger service in Canada, is in the throes of taking over the Dayliner service. It has got as far as introducing a competitive new set of fares. Passengers are flocking to the single 71-passenger car of the Dayliner, so many in fact that they are regularly being turned away. There are more cars available in Montreal. But is there a second car on its way to handle this overflow of passengers?

Of course not. CP Rail, which is still running that part of the business, continues to "closely monitor" the overflow. It says it will make a decision soon on whether this is just a spasm of public interest or a significant demand, which should be "discussed" with VIA Rail.

A cynic might suggest this approach is right in character, that about the time all those extra passengers trying to get aboard the Dayliner get tired of being left at the station, CP Rail will reach a decision. It may wait long enough to have public interest die a natural death, cancelling the need for a second car. Or it may wait until public interest is just mortally wounded, bring in the second car and eventually be able to say — see, we told you so, no real interest.

All very puzzling — unless you understand that CP Rail wants out of the rail passenger business. That business has generally been a money-loser across the country. It doesn't seem to matter that the Victoria-Courtenay Dayliner service could be an exception to that experience.

The fact is no one knows what the potential for Vancouver Island rail passenger service is — because no one, least of all CP Rail, has really tried to deliver it.

The tax bite: nibbles at every turn

The passage, by an overwhelming majority, of California's Proposition 13 — to cut property taxes by 57 per cent and to limit the annual increase to two per cent — was widely criticized in Canada.

Dire results were forecast. Mass layoffs of teachers, firemen and police — the social fabric would be destroyed. Yet the reduction in total tax take is only 15 per cent. Does anyone believe that the budget — ANY budget — can't be cut by 15 per cent?

Canadian critics asserted that Canadians were much better off. Property taxes in California had risen steeply. By reducing them to one per cent of market value, Proposition 13 merely brought them down to the Canadian level.

But the critics ignored two facts: First, that property taxes are only part of the story; and second, that the Canadian parliamentary system denies taxpayers recourse to the referendum that made Proposition 13 possible.

In May, 1978, it was estimated that a worker earning $19,700 in New York State would have to make $29,380 in Canada to achieve the same standard of living. The difference consisted of higher taxes and living costs.

Although income tax is the most visible, more significant tax differences are concealed.

For example, if that American worker bought a Chrysler New Yorker in Toronto it would cost him $1,100 more in taxes alone than if he bought it in Buffalo.

The house that he sold in Buffalo for $53,000 would cost him $75,000 to replace in Toronto. That difference is due to tax on materials, higher interest and labor costs but also to restrictive Canadian government practices that delay construction, sometimes for as long as three years.

Higher taxes on gasoline, on alcoholic beverages, on tobacco, higher premiums for health care, pensions and unemployment insurance, higher interest rates on mortgages, mortgage interest not deductible from income tax, property tax not deductible — the list goes on.

Where does all the extra Canadian tax money go? Too much of it is simply taken from Peter to pay Paul, while paying a massive bureaucracy in the process. Now even taxes aren't enough. Governments are borrowing more, much more, than they take in.

The process is insidious. The more "free" or subsidized services the government supplies, the greater will be the demand.

The spread of "public" housing and of rent controls to supply housing below the market price creates a demand that can never be satisfied. The housing shortage becomes permanent.

The growth of unemployment "insurance" into a regular source of income inclines more to partake of it. The ranks of the unemployed increase.

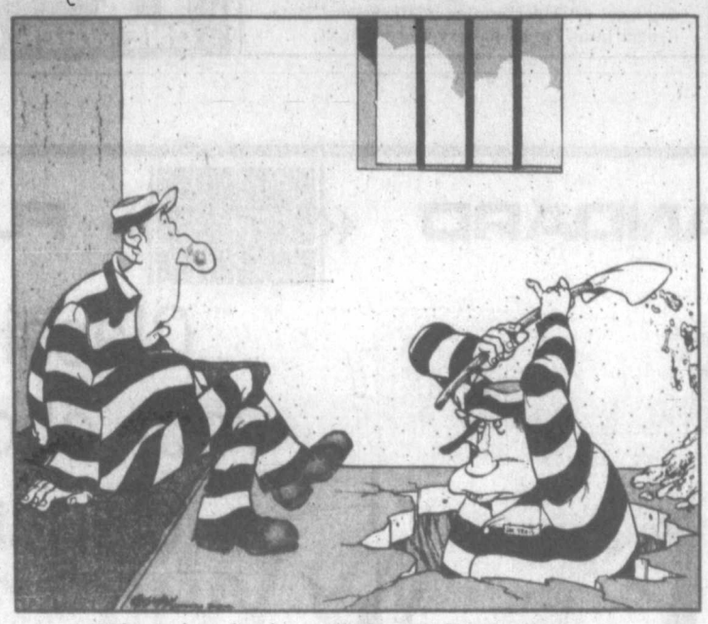

"Free" education is at the cost of taxpayers who have no control over the tax money that is spent. Most of the cost is in salaries, yet nearly half of the wage bill is for the educational bureaucracy, not for teachers.

It is this illusion that tax money is somehow different from other money, and can be spent foolishly without penalty, that distinguishes government spending from private spending. Wealth is created by individuals. Governments merely redistribute it.

The message from the California voters to their governments was: "That's enough. Stop wasting our money and start making do with less."

Canadian voters may well envy them the machinery which allowed that message to be sent.

"The Quebec police forgot all about the kidnap charge but threw the book at me for sending the ransom note in English."

How many Chinese are there?

Not even China can be sure

By EDWARD NEILAN

Does anyone know the true population of the People's Republic of China?

Is it 800 million, the figure used in a number of publications over the last few years? Is it "over 900 million," as some experts have guessed recently? Or is the figure already one billion, a level usually used as the number that would be achieved by the year 2000?

Or are we better off referring to the Chinese population as "one-quarter of mankind?"

I have just finished reading a lengthy paper, "China's Population Growth: Another Perspective" by Leo A. Orleans, China research specialist at the U.S. Library of Congress. Orleans was a major contributor to "China: a Reassessment of Economy," a report of the Joint Economic Committee of the U.S. Congress, July 1975.

Orleans admits in the paper that his 1975 estimate of China's population was probably off by 20 million. He places that nation's number of people today at 909 million.

The next two years, according to Orlean's latest projections, will see totals of 922 million and 934 million respectively.

Orleans has a real predicament facing him in his ongoing studies. Every time he arrives at a conclusive figure, another five or 10 million Chinese show up in reports from an outlying area, or through a fractional change in birth or death rate calculations.

It is something like the situation in A. J. Liebling's article on "Chiang Kai-shek's Rubber-Type Army" years ago when the totals kept changing every time they appeared in print.

Orleans says, "I am convinced that the Chinese have neither the vital rates for the country nor the data necessary to judge the weight of all the various factors that go into estimating crude birth and death rates. Futhermore, I do not believe that this situation will improve for a long time to come. Thus, while we can disagree with the various estimates and even sneer at some of the figures proposed by others, in the final analysis there is no way to prove anyone right or wrong. In a way, it is an enviable position for a crystal ball gazer to be in."

Unless I can't read English, Orleans is saying that not even the Chinese leadership knows how may Chinese there are in the country.

Numbers, after all, are not all that important. But it is easy to see how projections for everything from per capita gross national product to production figures can be affected by reliance on uncertain base data.

The enormity of China's population strikes home in other ways: When I was visiting China in 1973, a member of our group asked a seemingly sensible question of an army officer in Kwangtung province. "Does every 18-year-old have to go into the army here?" The Chinese officer roared with laughter and then answered through an interpreter: "If that were the case, we'd have three million new inductees every year!"

Later at a textile factory, a manager remarked casually that China had the world's largest textile industry. Wait a minute, a dozen Western minds questioned to ourselves, what about Japan and others? One of our group actually verbalized the question. The answer, with a smile: "You see, we have to have the world's largest textile industry. We have to clothe more people by far than any other nation — and we still export some cloth to Southeast Asia!"

The realization of China's size and the recognition of the impact of a developing China on the future of the world are areas to ponder. The West is just beginning an exercise what might be called "coming to grips with China." The game will intensify in the years to come.

A bomb attempt on Adolf Hitler's life failed as the remnants of the German opposition sought to bring about a coup d'etat 34 years ago today — in 1944.

The fact that Hitler had escaped death was unknown to the conspirators, who went about implementing their plan. They were quickly rounded up and executed.

Hitler was frightened by the attempt and instituted his last and most savage purge in which thousands of people were shot.

The Soviet dissident trials won't produce a true crisis

WASHINGTON — The second week of July goes down on the list of times that have put a severe strain on the Soviet-American relationship.

The Soviets put on trial two leading Jewish dissidents, Anatoly Shcharansky and Alexander Ginzburg, accusing the first of "treason" and the second of "anti-Soviet agitation." The halls of Congress in Washington erupted into a chorus of demands of reprisals.

A "man from Mars" arriving on Capitol Hill during the affair might easily have concluded from the rhetoric that the United States was heading toward at least a major crisis, and perhaps even a war, with the Soviet Union. But a careful study of the words actually used would suggest caution.

For example, Sen. Robert Dole of Kansas, a Republican presidential hopeful, was loud in calling for "suspension" of talks on strategic weaponry and on trade. But Senator Dole did not call for an end to talks and trade, only for "suspension."

A break in trade relations would mean an end to wheat shipments and hence a sudden drop in the price of wheat on the American market. That would be unpopular with the wheat farmers of Senator Dole's home state.

U.S. Secretary of State Cyrus Vance proceeded to a meeting in Geneva with Soviet Foreign Minister Andrei A. Gromyko when the strategic arms talks went on as scheduled regardless of the Shcharansky-Ginzburg trials. This carried out the formal policy of the United States to pursue arms limitations regardless of events in the field of human rights.

In that area of "human rights" there was little room for doubt that the Kremlin was deliberately making difficulties for President Carter in Washington. Ever since he opened his first year in office by criticizing the Soviets for failures to honor their commitments under the Helsinki agreements, they have been more open than usual in their campaign against dissidents.

Moscow always suppresses dissent. The Soviet state does not believe in, or allow, public dissent against its policies. But usually it acts more quietly and with less severity against dissenters. These were staged publicity trials. Obviously, the Soviets want to stamp out right now a condition that has existed for some time in Moscow, but particularly since the Helsinki agreements of midsummer of 1975.

Throughout the Soviet bloc of countries committees were formed to report on observance of the human-rights features of the agreements. Mr. Shcharansky became a main channel of communications between the Moscow group and American reporters in Moscow.

Alfred Friendly Jr., an American reporter in Moscow at the time, says Mr. Shcharansky in effect was the press agent of the dissidents. Much of the news printed in the world press about the dissident movement came out of Moscow through that connection.

The attitude of the Soviet government toward the Jewish dissidents in this midsummer of 1978 is similar in one respect to the suppression of political dissent by the government of Czechoslovakia in 1968.

The Soviets suppressed freedom of dissent by the Communist government of that country to re-establish their political and military control over their military forefield in Central Europe. They knew the deed would damage them in world opinion. They did it obviously out of a grim feeling of necessity. They accepted the consequences.

This current deed also is damaging them in world opinion. French Communists marched in the parade in Paris protesting against the Shcharansky-Ginzburg trials. But from their own point of view, did the Soviets really have any other option? Had they allowed a continued free flow of communication between dissenters in their midst and the world press, dissent might have spread beyond the Jewish and intellectual communities to the many other potential dissenters in the Soviet Union. Their whole system might have been put in danger.

That it will do permanent damage to Soviet-U.S. relations is doubtful. The brutal suppression of freedom in Hungary in 1956 and in Czechoslovakia in 1968 shocked the outside world. It cost Moscow the loyalty of many Communists. It undermined Moscow control over Communist parties beyond the range of the Soviet armed forces. But it did not prevent the outside world from doing business with the Kremlin.

President Carter had been "leaning on" the Soviets for some time before the latest publicity trials. During June he accused them of responsibility for the invasion of Shaba Province of Zaire. Also, Washington arrested two Soviet agents in New York — and publicized the case.

The Soviets claim this violated a long standing "gentleman's agreement" to do these spy matters quietly. The two "spies" could have been sent home without publicity had Washington wanted to play the hand that way. Moscow has retaliated by arresting Americans publicly, and disclosing previous similar cases.

The effect of the latest trials on the flow of Jewish emigration from the Soviet Union is to be watched. It reached it peak in 1973 in the first flush of the Nixon-Kissinger "detente." In that year the Soviets granted 35,000 exit visas to Jews.

When the Senate refused to approve "most favored nation" treatment for the Soviets, they cut back on exit visas. The figure was down to 20,695 for 1974, and down further to about 13,000 in 1976.

Since then it has been rising steadily. It reached 12,000 for the first six months of this current year. If that rate were continued, then 1978 would be the highest year for Jewish emigration from the Soviet Union since 1973. On June 11 one Jewish group, the American Jewish Congress, announced approval for the granting of export credits to the Soviet Union in recognition of the improved record on Jewish emigration.

No such extension of new credits to the Soviets seems likely for the time being. But the record since the Second World War would seem to indicate that while Moscow's mistreatment of its own citizens shocks the outside world, over a over again it does not lead to international crises or war.

Worth Trying

The Toronto Star

In January of last year the U.S. unemployment rate was 7.8 per cent. But President Jimmy Carter had a goal: He wanted the rate down to 6 per cent by the end of 1978.

Last Month it was down to 5.7 per cent.

In January of 1977, Canada's unemployment rate was 7.5 per cent. But the Trudeau government did not have a goal to cut unemployment.

Last month Canada's unemployment rate was up to 8.6 per cent.

Trying sure makes a difference.

THESE OPINIONS offered free for the reading. . .

It is very obvious the message has not as yet sunk in. The warning signs have been posted for many months — we are in a somewhat desperate economic situation in Canada. Our unemployment is at an unacceptable level, our dollar is battered with further erosion every month of the year. Yet the papers are full of the wrong kind of remedies. They are full of strike actions by workers wanting a bigger slice of a pie that has already been worked over to a fair-thee-well. In many instances they are asking for far more than they are worth to the economy and further harm the economy by the loss of man hours of work. They can not see the dreadful writing on the wall, they do not seem to understand the unemployment picture, they can't get it through thick skulls that such strike action, such greed, could easily lead to more unemployment — their own. Those who run businesses are no less guilty. They have, in far too many documented instances, raised prices where price raises were not called for, nor needed. They go their merry greedy way safe in the knowledge the federal government is slow, very slow, to act in a strong way to curb such price increases. Government itself shows unbelieveable lack of restraint by dunning us all for extra fuel costs. All categories mentioned are without common sense or logical reasoning. . .

THE British Columbia Amateur Golf Championship is being played in our town at the Uplands club this week and it brings out a small bit about sportsmanship. To get into this event, a golfer must have a handicap of four or better. Now when they started it Wednesday morning, more than 200 golfers teed it up. I suggest to you there aren't 200 bona fide four handicappers in the whole province, which means some are playing in this event under the false pretences of deflated handicaps. One noted golfer, who shall remain nameless for obvious reasons, said it all. "It is a joke and the worst part is they are cheating nobody but themselves." . . .

THERE HAS TO BE longing admiration for a guy who can chuck a good job so he can indulge himself some of the pleasures of living. Norm Grohman, the weather fella from channel 8, gave up his very remunerative position because he wanted time to do things of his choosing. Like a bicycle tour of the Gulf Islands, like bringing in the harvest on the Prairie wheat fields this fall and like a leisurely tour of Cuba to discover first hand the difference in that country today from what he first experienced prior to the Castro takeover. I wish Norm Grohman well. I admire his decision. . .

THIS OPINION from another source but shared by y'r obedient servant. It's from Suzanne Fowler of our town.

"This is to bring to your attention the inset photo on Page 8 of the summer issue of Beautiful British Columbia. The picture is described as 'Porte d'Enfer Canyon.' "

My limited French tells me this is Hell's Canyon, but on with the opinion.

"What's with our provincial government, taking liberties with such an historic place name? I'm sure Thompson, Fraser, Mackenzie and company never referred to this hellish bit of river as Porte d'Enfer Canyon, and to see it dubbed as such in an official provincial publication is an insult to them and to the people of British Columbia." Agreed — tell it to Grace McCarthy. . .

AND FINALLY, I am of the opinion that some injustice has been done (by me) to Jim Campbell, chairman of the Capital Region board. I recently wrote that Campbell has a room at The Empress (on a yearly basis) which is paid by taxpayers' money. That part was correct, but in that Campbell, who lives on Saturna Island, spends three days per week in Victoria, a yearly deal might well be necessary. There is, however, the cost factor and Campbell feels it is not excessive. He worked out a deal with The Empress management four years ago — a room in the garret — for $150 per month. That figure has increased to $240 per month, but it is still much lower than what he would have to pay on a daily rate at the same hostelry. He also points out that by having such a central location, he does not need cars or cabs to conduct his business. My math shows his present hotel costs are about half of what he would pay on a daily rate and on this basis, my original bleat about costs was unfair. No, he didn't ask for this apology. . .

He won't give an inch

Dateline - May 16, 1980.

The Secret Metric Police (SMP) today swooped down on J. T. Harrison, an elderly recluse living in the Sooke Hills. The 81-year-old man was found to have Fahrenheit thermometers both inside and outside his cabin as well as a sizeable collection of yardsticks, foot rules and 15 to 20-foot tape measures.

Further investigation by the SMP uncovered a stash of imperial measure containers and two scales calibrated in pounds. Possession of these illegal articles alone could bring as much as five years imprisonment.

An SMP spokesman said, however, that because of Harrison's age he would likely receive a suspended sentence provided he promises conversion to metrication.

Led away in handcuffs, and shouting in the outlawed English language, Harrison declared, "I'll be six feet under before I give an inch!"

Pumping station validity on line

Re: Oak Bay sewage disposal problem and the Monday night meeting of Capital Region board chairman Campbell with Oak Bay council. The issue is not just the pumping station, but the validity of the whole project.

Since the original project was put forward over a decade ago, it has been altered from its original concept and subsequent information has shown that even the original planning was based on inadequate data.

The Clover Plant outfall was not in the original plan but was put in by an engineering interpretation based on cost alone. Since then, when construction started recently, it has been revealed that the engineers were so willing to promote most any kind of outfall project that they overlooked the velocity of existing currents, and the pipeline could not be built as planned.

This revelation about currents is important, because it shows that no matter where the outfall is, between Albert Head and Trial Island, that the flow of the tides is clockwise along the Victoria waterfront and that its velocity will inevitably bring the sewage back in towards the Royal Roads basin. In fact, this motion is evident if one looks at the beaches and sandpits along the waterfront.

As Ald. Murray Glazier pointed out, in one of his very interesting TV Urban Report programs about two months ago, the erosion of the shoreline and sandspit build-up is from west to east. And this just substantiates further what the oceanographic charts of the original sewer project had long ago revealed.

So, when Campbell talks about protesters wasting time and money, he is merely trying to continue justifying a project that should not have been started in the first place. It has been one of these projects in which engineering firms have been less than professional and have certainly not acted in the best interests of good city planning. And Campbell has been so obstinate that he has been easily misled.

Beside these facts, there has been a very important shift in public thinking regaring protection of the environment. And with new technology in sewage disposal, there is every justification to believe that a new study of the whole issue would come up with entirely different alternatives to the dumping of sewage into the ocean. The fact that the energy crisis has occurred and that millions are being spent to use waste wood as a source of energy gives to the recycling of sewage an entirely new dimension. It too is a recognized source of energy.

Thus, to have Campbell insult protesters because they are trying to have a decade old concept revalued and stop the spending of more millions on a project that is now primarily political, is just about the limit.

Civic Scene by Hubert Beyer

WHILE TRACKING DOWN some New Democratic Party members of the Legislature for a story the other day, I ran into Wayne Harding, research officer for the NDP caucus.

He wanted to know why I was becoming such a right-winger lately. He said I was turning into some latter-day Doug Collins of the Vancouver Sun.

Normally, such remarks don't bother me. In this line of work, you get accused of being everything from a fascist to a raving spcialist.

In this case, however, it was the source of the statement that surprised me more than anything else.

Harding, a public servant now, held a political job under the NDP government. He was executive assistant to then highways minister Graham Lea. And before that, he was a newspaperman working for the afternoon Times.

I can forgive a politician for accusing me of being partisan, especially a B.C. politician. In this province's brand of politics, an MLA would rather have his tongue ripped out than give a party other than his own credit for a good idea.

But a former reporter should know better. Harding, too, must have been subjected to barbs from politicians telling him that he was blatantly biased, and unless there was an element of truth to such accusations, it shouldn't even occur to him to suspect reporters of becoming right-wing or left-wing supporters.

I don't know what led him to utter his little indiscretion and frankly, I don't care very much either. I could have been my applause for Human Resources Minister William Vander Zalm when he cut 16- to 18-year-olds off welfare.

I have three teenage sons and as in any other family, there are the inevitable arguments. More than once, they've informed me that they'll move out. Asked how they intended to live, they happily told me they'd go on welfare.

They've never gone through with it, preferring family life, use of the family car, fishing trips, holiday trips, a regular allowance and a lot of love, to the uncertainties of welfare, the odd run-in with their parents notwithstanding.

But I'm sure thousands of youngsters have made good their threat over the years, leaving their homes to become a burden on the taxpayers.

I still think cutting these youngsters off welfare was one of the best moves Vander Zalm ever made and it may prevent a lot of families from breaking up.

I may also have earned my partisan label for praising Recreation Minister Sam Bawlf's contribution to the city of Victoria, although both Bawlf and Vander Zalm have been the target of a lot of brickbats in this column.

And while we're at it, my occasional praise for the government also appears to have confused a couple of cabinet ministers. One of them said he was really amazed, considering that Beyer ran for the NDP in Saanich.

Well, Beyer ran for alderman in Saanich a couple of years ago, but not for the NDP. In fact, Beyer declined an offer from the NDP to contribute a little bit to the campaign expenses. There were no similar offers from other parties, which hurt my pride a little, but they, too, would have been declined.

In retrospect, Beyer is glad he didn't get elected, but just for the record, he didn't run for any party or individual. He ran on his own platform.

I'm mentioning all this to point out how polarized politics is in B.C. Everybody is expected to subscribe unquestioningly to one philosophy or the other. It's socialism versus free enterprise. And the moment someone voices an opinion he's pushed into the nearest political camp.

So for what it's worth, Beyer is neither becoming a right-winger nor a left-winger. He's a reporter whose reputation for being unbiased is a lot more important to him than the gratitude of a party with which he may share certain basic beliefs.

And you should have known that, Wayne.

THE ONLY THING WRONG with Victoria Mayor Michael Young's decision to cut in half the recommended grant for the Shamrocks was that he didn't reduce it to zero.

For the life of me, I don't see why the taxpayers should help send the Shamrocks to the Commonwealth Games in Edmonton next month. I hope that the ease with which the grant request was approved by the finance committee had nothing to do with the fact that a number of senior city hall officials are great lacrosse fans, some of them holding positions in the club.

Because I wonder how a request for funds from the Budgets would fare at city hall? Would be the same thing, wouldn't it?

Fortunately, the mayor cut the grant down to $500, but he should have gone all the way.

Place your bets

In his column July 12th Gorde Hunter referred to the proposed $21,000 annual salary, plus fringe benefits, currently offered striking brewery workers in this province, and commented, "Bet some school teachers would love to have such a contract in their pockets."

My bet is that the majority of teachers would reject such an offer out of hand.

Statistics provided September 1977, Form J, by Educational Data Services, B.C. Ministry of Education, shows the average salary of the 28,009 teachers in this province that year was $19,548, but no mention was made in the report of the estimated $3,500 annually in fringe benefits.

Since that report was issued there have been very substantial increases in wages and benefits to teachers out of taxpayers' pockets.

It should be borne in mind that in return for their quite handsome financial compensation the brewery workers are required to be on the job and turn out a reasonably satisfactory product.

Teachers, feeding at the educational welfare trough, are not, of course, subject to the usual conditions of employment which apply in the private sector.

Logging moratorium must stand at Tsitika

This is a copy of a letter I have sent to: R. T. Ostby, Chairman, Tsitika Resource Planning Commission, B.C. Forest Service, 355 Burrard Street, Vancouver, B.C. V6C 2H1.

I strongly recommend a continuation of the present moratorium not to log the Tsitika River for the following reasons:

There is not a consensus of opinion amongst the Environment and Land Use Secretariat.

A. The fisheries representative is against it.

B. The wildlife biologist is against it.

Any roads into the area will immediately change the water system before even one tree is cut and thereby pose a threat to the largest run of summer steelhead on the east coast of Vancouver Island — plus trout and several other species of salmon.

I contend that fisheries is also a resource worthy of consideration and the proposal to maintain and enhance the fisheries resource as nothing but palliative treatment for brutalizing their natural habitat.

Further, I am alarmed at the proposal to have a log dump and breakwater west of the Tsitika outlet. It seems to me that this poses a threat to the ecological reserve at the estuary. Although outside it I believe tides and currents would carry bark, etc., and contaminate it, thereby rendering the token ecological reserve meaningless.

Questions I would like answered are:

Is there an alternative area that could be logged to produce the same volume of timber either on the Island or another part of B.C.?

Are we in fact policing the companies' methods of cutting, reforesting and harvesting? It has been said that we do not fully utilize our forests — that a much smaller land base is capable of a much higher timber yield if properly managed — and that such has not been the case. That although improvements have been made they are still inadequate when the long-term view is considered.

Nothing in the present plan convinces me that there will not be over-cutting. If your contention to log this last watershed is valid I wish you would educate the public in forest management. The presentation and public meetings have been held in such a way that few people are aware. No real use of the media has been made: T.V., radio and newspaper — which makes the whole thing very suspect to me.

Toronto trading

TORONTO (CP) — The Toronto stock market resumed its advance Wednesday to record another four-year high at the close of active trading.

The TSE 300 index rose to its highest since April 5, 1974, following Tuesday's fractional loss.

A total of 857 contracts were traded on the options market, up from 679 Tuesday.

Ocelot Industries Ltd. topped the 69 block trades with 95,400 Class A shares at $15.00 a share and 58,900 Class B shares at the same price.

BP Canada Ltd., the session's most active industrial, took second place with 55,000 shares at $16.37 a share, followed by 30,000 shares of Banque Canadienne Nationale at $16.25 a share.

Trading will resume at today's opening in shares of Southam Press Ltd., halted about noon Wednesday, and Coles Book Stores Ltd. following news of a $23.00-a-share takeover bid by Southam.

F.P. (WESTERN) WANTS IT ALL

Sun Publishing going private

The Vancouver Sun

The Sun Publishing Co. Ltd. is going through its last days as an active corporate identity. Its shareholders are being asked — some might even say urged — to redeem their class A and B shares, before a special meeting of shareholders in Vancouver July 27, for $69 per share.

What is happening is an amalgamation of two companies. F.P. Publications (Western) Ltd., a private corporation, is attempting to buy up the shares of Sun Publishing, a public company. If the move succeeds, Sun Publishing will cease to exist as an operating publisher and its activities in Pacific Press Ltd. will be controlled by F.P.(Western) Ltd.

Estimated cost to F.P. (Western) is $14.3 million.

There is no indication that anything outward will change, other than the fact that public statements about the financial health of Sun Publishing will no longer be made. F.P.(Western) will likely continue to share ownership of Pacific Press on a 50-50 basis with Southam Press Ltd., a public company.

Pacific Press is the proprietor of The Vancouver Sun and The Province. Southam controls The Province half of the operation which is carried on in a shared building on south Granville St.

However, F.P. (Western) is attempting to buy more than a newspaper, one which it controls already through majority ownership of both classes of Sun Publishing shares. Also involved are marketable securities held by Sun in the quoted market value of $25.9 million, plus properties in the Coachella Valley area of California near Palm Springs, the cost of which is listed in company statements at $421,208.

Then, Sun Publishing also holds a $2¼-million demand debenture of Pacific Press, with interest payable at demand.

The majority of marketable securities are predominantly Canadian. Among the common shares held are those in Ronalds Federated Ltd. and Monarch Life Assurance Co. About 50 per cent of the securities are in short and long-term notes, bonds, debentures and preferred shares and the other 50 per cent in common shares.

It's no simple amalgamation. For one thing, if the amalgamation attempt succeeds, the newly-formed division of F.P. (Western) Ltd. will then be regulated under the Canada Business Corporations Act, and will no longer be incorporated under the Companies Act of British Columbia, as it has been since incorporation in February, 1915.

In order to effect the amalgamation both amalgamating companies must be subject to the same corporation statute.

By GEORGE GIBSON
Colonist Business Editor

Sun Publishing, in its recent mailing to shareholders, states that no person beneficially owns, directly or indirectly, more than 10% of the issued and outstanding A or B shares, except for F.P.(Western) Ltd.

F.P.(Western), a comparatively new corporation (see accompanying story), owns 217,707 class A shares or 58.1% and 325,442, (86.8%) of the class B, all of which were transferred to the new firm last June 19 by F.P. Publications Ltd., the western section's parent.

F.P. bought 600 class A shares at $48¼ and Sun declares that no other purchases were made by F.P. for 12 months prior to June 15, 1978.

This leaves 157,293 issued and outstanding class A shares and 49,558 class B shares in the hands of others.

Sun further declares that its officers and directors held 1,425 class A and 7,737 class B shares and that F.P. officers and directors or their associates held no shares at June 15, 1978.

Vital vote 'democratic'

The method of decision of whether or not to amalgamate Sun Publishing with its majority owner, F.P. Publications (Western) Ltd. may be a first for Canada and, in the words of B.C.'s Superintendent of Brokers, "a very democratic way of doing it."

What will happen is that those in the minority with respect to outstanding shares, are going to get to decide by simple majority whether or not the amalgamation will take place.

F.P.(Western), which owns 58.1% of the class A and 86.8% of the class B shares, will abstain from voting and allow others to decide on the amalgamation, and its result which will give them a $69 return for each of their shares.

Provincial Superintendent of Brokers William Irwin said this week that he's never heard of such a happening.

William Winnett, Sun secretary-treasurer, said in an interview that he realized it was an unusual course of action but that directors felt that new securities regulations that will be coming into effect in Ontario, eventually, will require giving minority shareholders such a consideration.

Irwin, however, reminded that Ontario doesn't have a requirement in their laws that would provide for a court hearing and possible arbitration in the event of a strong dissent from minority shareholders. This is law in B.C. and Manitoba.

The actions at the meeting will bear close attention by shareholders. Those holding B class shares will first be asked to vote for continuance (or direct transfer) of Sun from the jurisdiction of the Companies Act of B.C. to the Canada Business Corporations Act.

Swift approval, likely by telephone, will be obtained for the transaction from Ottawa (it's already been obtained in B.C. from the Ministry of Consumer and Corporate Affairs).

Then holders of both classes of shares will get to vote on whether or not to amalgamate.

Assuming that approval is voted, holders of both classes of shares will then be issued $5.52 cumulative redeemable first preference or second preference shares which are redeemable for $69. The $5.52 designation constitutes an 8% return on the redemption price.

Then, shareholders of record of Aug. 15, 1978, who have been paid two quarterly dividends in the first six months of the fiscal year to date (68¢ for A and 65½¢ for B), will be given a further 34¢ and 32¾¢ dividend for half of the current quarter.

Naturally, there is a deadline for redemption — Aug. 15.

Shareholders can have a choice between the first or second preference shares. This is being done to allow them to take the route that is more advantageous to them for tax purposes.

Shareholders can declare their returns from the transactions as either capital gains or dividend revenue.

IS OFFER FAIR ONE?

There are two key questions surrounding the Sun Publishing-F.P. Publications (Western) Ltd. amalgamation. Why does F.P.(Western), which already controls Sun Publishing, want the rest of it? Further, is the $69 redemption price a good one?

The answer to the first question, as contained in Sun's mailing to shareholders, simply states "the proposed amalgamation of the Company with F.P. Western is a step in the continuing policy of F.P. to consolidate its publishing operations into wholly-owned operating units."

Then-F.P. president and director, Richard S. Malone, said the same thing in December of 1976 when F.P. — before F.P.(Western) was incorporated — made a $60-per-share offer that was withdrawn a month later. Malone is now chairman and director and George N.M. Currie is president and director of F.P.

Malone said later that the offer was withdrawn because F.P. directors were not unanimous on the issue. Shares were trading at $39 and $35 for A and B respectively at the time of the $60 offer.

Then, last May 8 a $65 offer for the shares was announced. The offer was bumped up another $4 and brought approval and a recommendation to shareholders to accept from Sun directors on June 24. The class A shares were quoted at the time on the Vancouver Stock Exchange for $53 and the class B shares at $48.

Sun Publishing has been paying dividends since 1956 and the annual figure has almost doubled in the last five years.

Pemberton Securities undertook an evaluation of the offer for Sun directors and stated in that the company's investments in marketable securities worked out to a valuation of $34.57 per share, the $69 offer is "fair and reasonable and represents fair value."

The notice to shareholders points out the procedure to follow if individuals do not agree and fail to redeem the shares.

The shares came out in the late 50s, at or near $9 each.

Companies come, go as F.P. tidies up

If F.P. Publications (Western) Ltd. succeeds in its amalgamation with Sun Publishing, it will have completed a "tidying-up" operation begun just more than a year ago. A predecessor company was formed May 31, 1977 by amalgamation under the Canada Business Corporations Act of five wholly-owned subsidiaries of F.P. These five subsidiaries carried on, and F.P. (Western) continues to carry on, the business of publishing the Winnipeg Free Press, The Lethbridge Herald and the Report on Farming (Winnipeg).

On June 1, 1977 (or, one day later) F.P. sold to this predecessor company a division of F.P. which publishes The Albertan, the Northside Mirror and Southside Mirror, all in Calgary and which does typesetting for the Alberta Government Telephones directories.

Then on Dec. 31, 1977, F.P. Publications (Western) as it currently exists, was formed by the amalgamation under the Canada Business Corporations Act of the predecessor company with Victoria Press Ltd. and its two dormant subsidiaries, Colonist Publishers Ltd. and Times Publishers Ltd.

Victoria Press Ltd. published, and F.P.(Western) continues to publish The Daily Colonist and the Victoria Times. Victoria Press, Colonist Publishers and Times Publishers are now shown only as divisions of F.P. (Western) Ltd. in their statements and the "Ltd." has been dropped.

There have been no changes in the operations of any of these divisions since the amalgamation was announced late last December.

Sun Publishing informs its shareholders that the capitalization of F.P. (Western) included authorized an unlimited number of common shares without nominal or par value with 2,707 shares valued at $40,811,181 outstanding.

Retained earnings at March 31, 1978 amounted to $8,905,662 and the book value per share of F.P. (Western) was $24,433.

There is also an F.P. Publications (Eastern) Ltd., which is involved in similar manner with ownership of The Montreal Star, the Globe and Mail in Toronto and the Ottawa Journal. Head office for both companies is in Toronto.

Governments spend 41.2%

OTTAWA (CP) — Spending by governments now accounts for 41.2 per cent of total economic activity in Canada, a sharp rise from 30.8 per cent in 1961, a recently released steady from a Vancouver-based economic research agency says.

Michael Walker, research and editorial director of the Fraser Institute, says in real terms, after discounting for inflation, government spending has risen by 108 per cent since 1961.

He was addressing the 1978 Canadian investment seminar held at the University of Western Ontario in London, Ont.

The study measures government spending as a percentage of Gross National Product (GNP), which is the total value of all goods and services produced in the national economy. On this basis, governments were spending 41.2 per cent of GNP or $3,635 for every man, woman and child.

Following a recent meeting with top business leaders in Ottawa, Finance Minister Jean Chretien said agreement was reached for the government to take a smaller share of the national economy. This would leave a greater role for private industry, Chretien and the businessmen said at a press conference.

Walker equates growing government intervention in the economy with a reduction in private freedom.

U.S. weighs missile cost

WASHINGTON (UPI) — A proposed MX intercontinental missile system would cost between $21.7 billion and $31.7 billion if completed in the 1980s, according to documents released this week by the U.S. Air Force.

A draft environmental impact statement also disclosed the system would involve high use of private land and dislocation of residents in areas of the western United States under consideration as base sites.

The five-volume statement was issued for public comment in preparation for a scheduled decision in October whether to go ahead with the program and, if so, what sort of mobile base system should be adopted.

Despite the deadline, Pentagon sources are saying a final basing decision, already delayed a year, may be put off again. The mobile-based MX is being sought because more accurate Soviet missiles will threaten U.S. ICBMs in the 1980s.

Cost figures in the statement were the most detailed official estimates yet provided.

Development costs over five years were put at $6.7 billion. If a decision to deploy 200 to 250 of the missiles is made in 1983, an additional $15 billion to $25 billion is estimated for purchase and operating costs, depending on the type of basing used.

Basing systems considered in the statement are underground tunnels in which the missiles would be moved at random, shelters either located horizontally above ground or vertically below ground among which the missiles would be shuttled in "shell game" fashion, and pools of water in which missiles could be hidden.

Seven areas of up to 8,000 square miles each in the western United States are being compared as possible basing sites. "High levels of displaced inhabitants and private land required are associated with all modes in all areas," the statement said.

It said the alternative now most favored by the Air Force would be among those involving the greatest private land use and dislocation.

Areas being compared are central Nevada, California's Mojave Desert, the Luke Air Force Base area of Arizona, the White Sands Missile Range area in New Mexico, the West Texas-Rio Grande Basin area of Texas and New Mexico, the Texas-New Mexico high plains, and the South Platte plains in Nebraska, Kansas and Colorado.

LABEL TWEAKS LABOR BOARD CHAIRMAN

VANCOUVER (CP) — Don Munroe, the new chairman of the British Columbia Labor Relations Board, says he is surprised that he is being identified as a management man.

He said in an interview that he thinks he has been neutral in his last three years as LRB vice-chairman and will be able to demonstrate that neutrality when he takes over the top job at the end of this month.

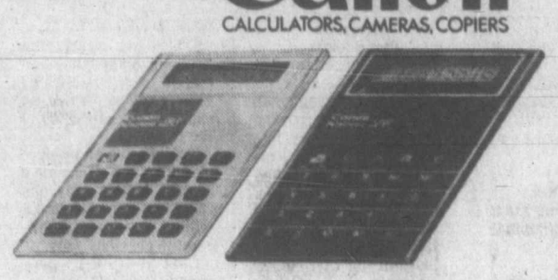

The criticism—tempered with the hope that it is unfounded—came from Dave MacIntyre, B.C. Federation of Labor secretary-treasurer, who said Munroe has served as management appointee to arbitration boards.

"Paul Weiler (former LRB chairman) came into the labor scene as a neutral," MacIntyre said. "Both management and labor knew him as a neutral.

"I don't know of too much criticism since he (Munroe) has been on the board, except that if you come from management or you come from labor you're identified with them."

Newsprint's really rolling

B.C. mills can't keep up

VANCOUVER (CP) — British Columbia newsprint producers are busy these days—so busy, in fact, that they are unable to take advantage of labor strife at mills in the western United States by expanding to fill that market.

All four B.C. producers—MacMillan Bloedel Ltd., B.C. Forest Products Ltd., Crown Zellerbach Canada Ltd. and Ocean Falls Corp.—are producing at full capacity and do not expect the situation to change for some time.

The western United States is already a major market for B.C. producers (with the exception of Ocean Falls with exports mainly to India, South America, Indonesia and Australia), but they will not be able to service any new customers looking for newsprint because of strikes which have already affected four newsprint mills in Washington and Oregon.

Contracts covering workers at a dozen other western U.S. operations also expire this year.

"We are running at full capacity," says Tom Rust, president and chief operating officer of Crown Zellerbach. "We can't basically get any more out of our mill. We are going as hard as we can."

The company's Elk Falls mill on Vancouver Island turns out more than 200,000 tons annually, most of which goes to the U.S. West Coast.

At MacMillan Bloedel, a spokesman said, "we are going flat out."

"There is no slack. Inventories are non-existent."

MacMillan Bloedel, the largest newsprint manufacturer in the province, with newsprint operations at Port Alberni and Powell River, has an annual rated capacity of 849,000 metric tons in B.C.

Ian Barclay, chairman of B.C. Forest Products, says his company has been operating at full capacity since last June and can take no more orders. He believes the boom will continue until at least 1980 when additional capacity in the U.S. comes on stream.

The paper business is booming right across Canada.

The Canadian Pulp and Paper Association said in its latest figures that manufacturers shipped more newsprint in May than they actually produced. Some 843,000 tons were produced in May, up 17.6 per cent from 1977, and shipments were 895,000 tons. Some 88,000 tons went to Canadian consumers and 685,000 to the U.S.

Total Canadian production for the first five months of this year has risen 12.2 per cent to 4.8 million tons from 3.6 million the previous year.

Last year, B.C. produced 1,427,000 tons of newsprint and sold $295 million worth to the U.S., $1 million to Japan, $600,000 to the European Economic Community and $81.7 million to all others. Newsprint makes up about one-third of the B.C. industry's pulp and paper exports.

Book stores to Southam

TORONTO (CP) — Southam Press Ltd., major publisher of newspapers and trade journals, has agreed to buy the Cole family interest, 62 per cent of Coles Book Stores Ltd.

The announcement was made Wednesday by both companies. Under the deal, Southam will purchase 900,000 shares owned by the Cole family at $23 a share.

The companies also agreed that Southam will make an early offering to minority shareholders at the same price per share.

Southam will not be obligated to complete the deal unless 90 per cent of the shares are tendered.

Jack Cole will remain as president and chief executive officer of Cole's, which operates 109 bookstores in Canada and 20 in the United States. Coles, which employs about 900, also publishes and sells more than 700 trade titles.

Last year, Coles earned $1,852,000 or $1.26 a share compared with 98 cents a share the previous year.

On the Toronto Stock Exchange, Coles was worth $21 a share when trading was halted at noon Tuesday.

Southam, whose shares were trading at $25 a share when it was halted at noon Wednesday, controls such major daily newspapers as the Montreal Gazette, Ottawa Citizen, Hamilton Spectator, Windsor Star, Winnipeg Tribune and Calgary Herald.

With more than 7,000 employees, Southam controls Southam Printing Ltd., one of the largest commercial printers in Canada.

Pacific Press Ltd., which produces the Vancouver Province and the Vancouver Sun, is one of its associate companies.

Armed forces: Put up or shut down, says MP

Canada's armed forces should be disbanded if badly-needed new armaments are not provided, says Conservative defence critic Allan McKinnon.

Re-equipping the forces is of prime importance and would enhance this country's role in the North Atlantic Treaty Organization, the Victoria MP said in an interview prior to leaving on a tour of Western Canadian Forces bases.

He said Defence Minister Barney Danson has "double-crossed the armed forces and double-crossed me," by secretly reducing promised spending on new armaments.

Danson, he said, had maintained he was keeping a long-standing policy promise of increasing real capital spending on defence by 12 per cent annually.

"However, when I checked recently with the financial department, I was told the real increase this year is only 2.8 per cent, McKinnon said. "I didn't mind him taking bows for decisions that had been made by former defence minister James Richardson as long as the badly-needed new armaments were being acquired—but I won't let him get away with this any longer."

He said Danson's explanation had been that he had a handshake arrangement with Treasury Board chairman Robert Andras to get an extra $60 million in a future year by taking the cut this year.

"Our armed forces personnel are very trusting souls, I doubt many of them realize the budget has been cut back from the amount promised."

Canada is now serving in a reserve role in NATO because "our equipment is not up to snuff," he said.

McKinnon said he receives many complaints about Canada's defence policy. "Many people just want us to be respectable partners to our allies."

Companies battling for the $2.3-billion fighter aircraft contract will get another chance to sweeten their bids, something most of the contenders welcome, he said.

The cabinet decision to give companies extra time to improve their proposals could affect the fighter project timetable "and create money problems for the government later on."

The government is asking the competing firms to supply 130 to 150 fighters for the $2.3 billion in 1977 dollars, but several of the firms have indicated they might not be able to meet that target.

The contending fighters are the Grumman F-14, the McDonnell-Douglas F-15, the General Dynamics F-16, the McDonnell-Douglas and Northrop versions of the F-18 and the Panavia Tornado. Panavia is a British-German-Italian consortium while the other firms are American.

McKinnon said government officials are recommending the three cheapest planes—the F-16 and the two F-18 versions—for the short list.

Several members of the Trudeau cabinet are not in favor of spending money on defence equipment, and nothing would please them more than seeing the issue deferred, he said.

The dilly-dallying by cabinet on the question of new armaments was worrying defence department officials, McKinnon said.

The new Leopard tanks the government is buying from West Germany could cost an extra $50 million because no arrangements were made in the estimates for the fluctuating exchange rate, he charged.

The $50 million figure is based on the dollar staying at the current German mark exchange, he said.

The government announced 18 months ago that it was buying 128 Leopard C-1 tanks for $187 million. Since then the Canadian dollar has fallen in value in comparison to the mark.

"Danson is shaping up as a total disaster as minister," McKinnon said. "He doesn't have the ability to wring things out of cabinet like his predecessor Richardson."

One of Danson's major blunders, he said, was in moving the Canadian Airborne Regiment from Edmonton to Petawawa where there were insufficient facilities.

"I opposed it bitterly. I couldn't see the logic in the move, it was absolutely baffling."

The defence critic also charged that the government's plan to acquire six ships at a cost of about $1.5 billion as a first step in a 20-year fleet replacement program, is already three months behind schedule, although the program only started seven months ago.

He questions many aspects of this program, especially the type of vessels being proposed.

McKinnon said he would like smaller patrol vessels.

He also has serious reservations about Canada's existing anti-submarine warfare program which, he said, is becoming more and more expensive and less and less productive.

Belize sculptor studies Canada for clues

By PAUL DE GROOT
Colonist reporter

Fashioning a distinctive art from a country like Belize is not easy, George Gabb admits.

The national sculptor of the country, better known in Canada as British Honduras, draws inspiration from a nation of 150,000 people who live on a sliver of the Yucatan Peninsula about the size of Vancouver Island.

About 40 per cent are descendants of Africans brought to the colony as slaves by British settlers. Others are Mayans, Caribs, East Indians, Spaniards, and Mestizos.

Many speak a distinctive form of Creole but Belize is the only country in South America where English is the official language.

Gabb himself is Mayan on one side, Negro-Welsh on the other. He is visiting Canada as a participant in an exchange program sponsored by the B.C. Inter-Church Committee on World Development Education.

Because of its history and mixture of races, Belize "doesn't really have a national culture," Gabb said on a visit to Victoria. As one of the country's premier artists, development of a distinctive artistic identity for the country is "my baby," he said.

A large part of his visit to Canada is viewing the work of native artists here.

"I have a lot of Indian in me. I am hoping to be able to be close to them, share with them."

On a visit to the Provincial Museum Wednesday, he spoke with several native Indian artists, and today he heads up-Island to visit native carvers at Koksilah.

"It was the first time I have seen a totem pole outside of a book, and immediately I sensed the spirit of Indian arts from here down to Chile."

Framing the air with his fingers, Gabb said "I took sections of the totem pole. I could see that that was Guatemala. That was Mexico."

Unlike the work going on in Belize, however, where Gabb is attempting to fashion a contemporary art form, native art in Canada appears to aim at "revitalizing an old culture, rather than creating a new expression of Indians living in this time and age."

"They are not thinking of the individual offering of the artist to society, but seem to be more concerned about mastering the old art, bringing out what has been stifled."

"I would have expected to see more creativity."

Nevertheless, the art of the native Indian probably serves an important function in a native society which has experienced great pressures from the modern age, Gabb admitted.

In Belize, by contrast, Gabb's aim is to "create an identity in sculpture different from anything else in America or Europe."

As Gabb describes the quest for a unique artistic expression owing a debt to none other in a poem called Ethnic Soul Song, written, as are many of his poems, to develop inspiration for a sculpture (in this case he liked the poem so well he didn't do the sculpture):

So stretch your hand afar
that this gift may afar be given.
give it to the wind, share it with everything.
and, greater still, you must live
this song until it may be seen
no fancy thought, no rhythmic sound
no lover's quest, no king's command.

Allan wows and warns chamber

By HUBERT BEYER
Colonist reporter

For a guy who compared himself to Zsa Zsa Gabor's sixth husband ("I know what to do, but I don't know if I can make it interesting"), Allan Fotheringham showed a remarkable oratorial talent at the Victoria Chamber of Commerce's noon luncheon Wednesday.

The Vancouver Sun's controversial columnist, some of whose enemies refer to him as the Sun's best fiction writer, had been invited to speak to the chamber at its monthly meeting in the Empress Hotel.

Fotheringham got more laughs than Gerry Gosley got for his jokes during a brief entertainment session at which the audience was treated to excerpts from the Smile Show.

But his humor didn't take anything away from the devastation of his attack on provincial and federal politicians.

Some examples:

● The difference between William Bennett and W.A.C Bennett is that "Bill takes the ferry when he comes to Victoria, his father used to walk."

● The provincial cabinet is considering a plan to put the whole province on a "two-year, 25,000-mile warranty."

● Travel Minister Grace McCarthy has a hard time coordinating the "rapidly-shrinking tall ships."

● Human Resources Minister William Vander Zalm had a fire recently at his house, during which his whole library was destroyed. "Both books were burnt and he hadn't even finished coloring one of them."

● Education Minister Patrick McGeer is so brilliant he can talk himself into any stupid idea.

● Prime Minister Trudeau is a "legend in his own mind."

But Fotheringham didn't devote his entire speech to a sardonic assessment of politicians. In a more serious vein, he predicted that the New Democratic Party would be back in power. It was only a matter of time.

Despite being beaten in the last election, the NDP had retained roughly 40 per cent of the popular vote, and if Progressive Conservative Leader Vic Stephens could draw some of the more right-wing elements from the Socreds, the NDP would be back in, he said.

On the national scene, Fotheringham warned that Anglo-Canadians were falling for a carefully orchestrated lie that the leading figures in the Parti Quebecois are a bunch of wild and uneducated men, bent on destroying Canada.

He said the PQ cabinet consisted of an intelligentsia which was largely educated outside Canada.

Collectively, the Quebec cabinet towered over any other cabinet in Canada, he said.

He said it was tragic that the separation issue was being decided by two men (Rene Levesque and Trudeau) who had been antagonists for decades.

But he speculated that in the end, Canada was larger than both and would survive them both.

Shell deflates recall link in steel-belted confusion

The recent massive recall of Firestone 500 radial tires in the United States has created some confusion in the minds of Shell Canada Ltd. customers. Firestone manufactures a similar tire for Shell in the United States which is sold only there as the Shell steel-belted X-100.

Shell Canada outlets, according to Miles Primrose, proprietor of Gordon Head Shell, sell a steel-belted X-100 tire, but it and other tires made for Shell Canada are made by Uniroyal, and not Firestone.

Primrose said that some of his customers had expressed concern about potential defects in their automobile tires and he said that their concerns were unfounded.

Industrial park soon—mayor

Barring unforeseen developments, Saanich Mayor Mel Couvelier is confident the municipality will have an industrial park before this November's municipal election.

"It should not become an election issue, the matter should be well in hand a long time before nomination day," he said in an interview.

Couvelier earlier this week made public details of council's plan to develop industrially about 80 acres of land flanking Interurban Road, just south of the Camosun College campus.

The land under option to Saanich totals 141 acres but only 80 acres are considered suitable for industrial development.

Couvelier expected opposition to the land banking scheme from proponenents of the Royal Oak industrial park proposal—a plan which died earlier this year when Couvelier broke a 4-4 deadlock and voted against rezoning the 100-acre site.

"The property owners may decide to wait until this year's election to see whether any radical changes occur in the council makeup," he said. "But it's my feeling the destiny of the Royal Oak site will be decided early next year."

Municipal staff are preparing an impact study which will assess a broad variety of factors, including the impact of the industrial park on the Interurban area, and its effect on the surrounding rural area, the floodplain and traffic patterns.

The land on which options are held is a combination of private and public ownership, in two tracts on the east and west sides of the road.

50 'derailed' from E&N

A minimum of 50 passengers were turned away from the Esquimalt and Nanaimo Railway passenger service Wednesday.

John Cooper, an E & N employee who is chairman of the E & N employees committee to save the service, said on his return from riding the train north to Parksville and back that possibly as many more also wanted to make the trip Wednesday but couldn't.

"A statement attributed to Don Collings, the CPR traffic chairman, that only between three and 10 people were being turned away, is all wet," Cooper said.

HE SAID HE had in his possession 50 cards signed by disappointed would-be passengers collected on Wednesday alone.

The cards will be sent to David Jones, chairman of the Canadian Transport Committee review committee, which will decide the fate of the service Dec. 13.

"Today there were enough passengers to fill two cars, although there was only one," he said.

"The ludicrous part about it is that the CPR put on a second man. What we need is more seats, not more employees," he added.

COOPER SAID about 25 people were permitted to ride the Dayliner while standing Wednesday. It carried a total of 230 passengers on the two-way trip.

He charged the CPR has "monitored the service to death" and added that it wasn't living up to its obligation to provide adequate passenger service.

A meeting of the Vancouver Island Committee to Save the E & N will be held tonight at Duncan city hall at 8 , to which the interested public is invited.

Pierre Berton, broadcaster and author of two novels about the CPR, may come to the aid of the endangered E & N Dayliner.

If he does, it will be largely due to the efforts of John Cooper of Victoria, E & N employee and member of the United Transportation Union. Cooper told a meeting of the Committee to Save the E & N in Duncan that he had sent a telegram to Berton to ask for his assistance.

Cooper said he hoped to get Berton to come to the Island to participate in the 92nd anniversary of the driving of the last spike on the E & N.

Committee members also hope to run a special excursion from Victoria to Duncan Aug. 13, using a steam engine and rolling stock from the Mainland. Aug. 13 is the anniversary of the start of the passenger service.

THE TRAIN would stop at Cliffside near Shawnigan Lake to relive the historic spike-driving exploits of former prime minister Sir John A. Macdonald 92 years previously.

Following the ceremony, the engine would steam the remaining 20 kilometres into Duncan where picnic-style festivities would be provided.

Cooper said the committee planned to approach Premier Bennett and Tourism Minister Grace McCarthy to help get the steam train over to Vancouver Island.

He said the steam train journey would be the start of the committee's push to reinstate Sunday passenger service on the Dayliner.

COOPER SAID he thought the recent train ride by Bennett and members of his cabinet was successful.

Cooper said his union had been recently successful in getting the Dayliner to run on time and there had been a reduction in fares.

The next step, he said, included getting the Victoria terminal back to the downtown area and away from the current Esquimalt station and resumption of Sunday service.

"The car has got to go back across the bridge to Victoria, that's where it all started. The Victoria station is only four or five minutes' walk from all the tourist hotels," Cooper said.

A MAJOR PUSH is also under way to promote and publicize the Dayliner service in the Seattle area, said another committee member, Victoria advertising manager Rick Trueman.

Trueman said this would be tied in with the sailing from Seattle of the Princess Marguerite. He said that half the remaining advertising budget for the Marguerite was being devoted to the idea of taking the Dayliner up-Island.

He also announced that a dairy firm which had committed itself to $10,000 worth of advertising promoting the Dayliner, would also be printing a poster to be displayed in retail stores urging people to use the train.

The committee also intends to get petitions signed opposing the proposed cancellation of passenger service.

Cruiser remains

Burnt and grounded hulk is all that is left of what was a 28-foot Tolleycraft until about 4 p.m. Wednesday. Owned by J.C. Hamilton of 9588 Ardmore Drive, it was having engine problems. When the engine was turned off, the rear of the boat exploded into flames near Bosun's Marina at Sidney. Hamilton and his wife headed for the water and were picked up by a dinghy from a passing sailboat.

Roxburgh leading U.S. opponents

By JIM REID

Defending B.C. amateur golf champion Doug Roxburgh found himself in an unusual situation following first round play Wednesday in the 1978 renewal of the championships at Victoria's Uplands Golf Club...but he isn't complaining.

A five-time last-day leader...and winner of the Bostock Trophy... Roxburgh couldn't recall, after matching par 70 over the lush 6,278-yard layout, ever having been ahead at this stage of past championships.

After a slow start during which he lost two strokes to par in the first sixth holes, the Vancouver Marine Drive ace birdied the seventh and eighth holes to make the turn at even par. He went two under par with birdies on the 11th and 13th holes but lost one stroke on the 14th and fell back to even par when he missed the fairway on the 18th hole, couldn't hit the green in two and two-putted after chipping short.

There was a scramble for spots behind Roxburgh with two Washington State golfers, Scott MacPherson of Seattle and Scott Alexander of Bremerton just one stroke back, another six at 72 and nine others, including two former B.C. champions and two past Willingdon Cuppers, at 73.

In the group at 72 were former B.C. junior team members Sandy Harper of Nanaimo, Dick Zokol of Vancouver Marine Drive and Rob Sherstobitoff of Castlegar along with 16-year-old Rick Gibson of Uplands, Stu Holroyd of Gorge Vale and Andy Girling of Marine Drive.

The former champions at 73 were two-time winner John Russell of Vancouver, a 13-time member of B.C. Willingdon Cup teams, and Bob Mitchell of Quilchena. Dave Mick of Royal Colwood, a four-time Willingdon Cupper, and Harry White of Marine Drive were also at 73 with Ross Logan of Qualicum Beach, Brian Rands of Uplands, Blair Christie and Brian Eccleston, both of Vancouver Seymour, and Steve Chapman of Prince George.

Another group of eight was locked at 74 while 13 were bunched at 75.

Gibson, Sherstobitoff and Mick all had chances at the lead but fell victims to troubles on the tight back nine. Gibson and Sherstobitoff both were forced to take two-stroke penalties as the result of errant drives while Mick, for the first time he could remember had double bogeys back to back on the 15th and 16th holes.

Second round play starts at 7:26 a.m. with Roxburgh's threesome, which includes Logan and Mike Gray of Uplands who is at 74, slated for a 12:27 tee-off. Several of the other leaders are within a few tee-off times either way.

After play today, the field will be cut to the low 80 golfers with a further cut to 50 and ties to be made for Saturday's final round.

The top 20 and ties among the B.C. golfers will be invited to the BCGA Invitational, July 29 at Squamish Valley Golf club and July 30 at Quilchena Golf Club. Scores for the four rounds of the Amateur and two rounds of the Invitational will be used to select the B.C. Willingdon Cup team.

PITCHES AND PUTTS — It doesn't mean that they will be accepted but golfers who finish the first two rounds here with scores of 151 or better will be eligible to submit entries for the Canadian Amateur...Golf Services, from which several entrants are registered, is a service originated by Ernie Brown of Vancouver and approved by the BCGA and RCGA through which public course players can have handicaps authenticated for tournament play...Only two eagles were recorded during opening day with Girling getting a three on the seventh and Robert Hamlyn, also of Marine Drive, turning the trick on the 15th...The Marine Drive team, headed by Roxburgh, took the lead in the competition for the Humber Trophy which concludes today, with a 297 total. Vancouver Seymour is in second place at 301 while Gorge Vale and Uplands are at 302.

Shamrocks clinch crown

By REG REYNOLDS

They'd better shore up the rafters in the Edmonton Coliseum.

Victoria Shamrocks and Nanaimo Timbermen are scheduled to play a pair of exhibition games there during the Commonwealth Games next month and if they play anything like they did at Memorial Arena Wednesday evening the Coliseum will be in danger of collapse.

The Shamrocks held off a furious Nanaimo rally and sent the approximately 1,500 fans home happy by clinching the Western Lacrosse Association championship with a 15-13 triumph.

The win, which gave Victoria it's second league title in three years, featured excellent goaltending and shooting, solid defence and unfortunately violent checking and a gruesome fight.

The Shamrocks went into the third period with an 11-5 lead but all the battling appeared to sap a Victoria squad played its second rugged game in as many nights.

League-leading scorer Brian Evans and top goal scorer Kevin Alexander got the Nanaimo fireworks started early in the third period.

Evans drew seven assists in the period and Alexander fired in four goals, two of them on spectacular behind the back shots while being checked and the others on screaming low shots from directly in the front of the net.

Evans finished with nine assists to tie the record of 100 assists in a season set by Mike Gates of Coquitlam Adanacs in 1969.

Alexander scored six goals giving him 78 for the season and leaving him 11 shy of the record 89 set by Bobby Allan of Nanaimo in 1956.

Outstanding goaltending by Nanaimo's Mac Maude and Victoria's Larry Smeltzer kept the score close in the first period which ended 3-1 Shamrocks but Maude slipped for a few minutes in the second period.

Ron MacNeil, who was the outstanding Shamrock with six goals, Norm Baker, Jeevan Dillon and Gord Lyons scored less than four minutes apart to make it 7-2 for Victoria.

Lyons and Randy Noble were the antagonists in the fight that culminated two periods of tension and chippy play. With one second remaining in the second period Lyons and Noble got into a shoving match. Lyons received six minutes in penalwhile Noble was given two. They continued to shout insults in the penalty box and suddenly squared off in a vicious slugfest that left both combatants bleeding when the officials were finally able to break it up.

Both players were given match penalties and when Ken King of Nanaimo and Dave Thomson of Victoria squared off one second later they were given minor penalties and game misconducts.

Nanaimo took 54 of the 94 minutes in penalties handed out.

Norm Baker, playing with a broken nose suffered Tuesday at Vancouver, scored three goals and had an assist, Ranjit Dillon assisted four times and Jeevan Dillon scored twice. Larry Bell, Joe McCrea and Charn Dhillon also scored for Victoria.

Tej Labh scored three times for Nanaimo, Jim Guerin scored twice and Bob Cool and Roger Dubyna scored once each.

Smeltzer, who came back after being knocked unconcious by an Alexander shot late in the first period, made 40 saves and Maude stopped 42 shots.

Shamrocks were without Gerry Cadwallader who was suspended for being the third man in during the mixup in Vancouver.

Two-out bunt boosts streak

Pete Rose extended his hitting streak to 32 games with a two-out bunt single in the ninth inning Wednesday night as Ken Henderson's three-run homer in the seventh and George Foster's grand slam in the eighth carried Cincinnati Reds to a 7-2 victory over Philadelphia Phillies in a National League baseball game.

It prevented Steve Carlton, 8-9, from recording his 200th career victory.

Rose, five games shy of Tommy Holmes' National League record of 37 straight games with a hit, had walked, grounded out twice, and struck out before he bunted safely toward third.

The Phillies led 2-0 with two out in the seventh before Carlton gave up singles to Johnny Bench and Dave Concepcion before Henderson's home run over the left field bullpen.

In the eighth Rose walked, Ken Griffey singled, Joe Morgan was intentionally walked, and Foster hit his league-leading 23rd home run off reliever Ron Reed.

Elsewhere in the National League, Dave Parker's two-run homer in the fifth inning helped Pittsburgh Pirates to a 6-3 victory over Los Angeles Dodgers.

Vida Blue became the first 13-game winner in the NL and Larry Herndon drove in four runs with three singles to lead San Francisco Giants to a 7-4 win over Chicago Cubs in the first game of a doubleheader. Larry Biittner's two singles drove in three runs as the Cubs scored seven times in the first two innings and held on for a 7-5 victory in the nightcap.

In the American League, Frank Duffy's run-scoring single capped a controversial four-run Boston seventh inning, rallying the Red Sox to an 8-2 victory over Milwaukee Brewers.

Ed Figueroa tossed a six-hitter and the slumping New York Yankees won for the third time in 12 games with a 2-0 shutout over Minnesota Twins.

Trail too much for city squad

NORTH VANCOUVER (CP) — Ray Ferraro hit two triples Wednesday, knocking in four runs to pace Trail to an 8-4 over Victoria's Gordon Head in the British Columbia prep baseball championships for 13 year olds.

The win boosted Trail into the final of the double-knockout tournament against Vancouver.

Dave Duncan and reliever Ian Cameron, who came on in the sixth inning, combined to allow eight hits by Victoria, two of them singles by losing pitcher Daryn Lansdell. Lansdell gave up 10 hits.

Sooke, Seaboard softball winners

The Stuffy McGinnis Men's League offered up a softball smorgasbord at Central Park Wednesday—great pitching, great hitting...and just a touch of insanity.

Randy Jackson of Seaboard Construction provided the pitching, tossing a five-hit shutout to defeat Victoria Athletics 2-0 in the second game of the doubleheader.

In the other game, things were a little crazy. Sooke Merchants chalked up at least one run every inning and wound up throttling Batesons 19-1.

Jackson struck out six in out-duelling Athletics' Ken Fox. Brian Grexton provided both Seaboard's runs with a two-run home run in the first inning.

Mike Banner and Norm Goudie drove in four runs each to help power Sooke. Goudie chipped in a homer and Bob Wilson scored four runs for the winners.

In Heywood Park Men's League play, Hygrade Radio dumped Taylor House Movers 7-4.

Meanwhile, Victoria Athletics dumped Ingraham Hotel 12-6 in a Senior Women's League game at Hyacinth Park and Esquimalt Combos downed Strawberry Vale Juniors 8-3.

Moretti in fine form

There are some new kids on the block and some of the Victoria Mussels are looking over their shoulders.

Maybe that's why Mussels reacted by playing what manager Jim Chapman calls "more aggressive baseball" Wednesday night.

Mussels, who welcome four additions from the Los Angeles Dodgers' farm system this week, halted Grays Harbor Loggers 7-2 at Royal Athletic Park, snapping Loggers' seven-game Northwest League win skein in the process.

Roy Moretti went the route to turn in his sixth straight solid pitching performance, taming the Loggers on six hits while throwing just 98 pitches.

The Victoria-born righthander earned his third win against two defeats, striking out three and walking two to lower his earned-run average to 3.98.

He was aided by some spectacular defensive work, particulary from second baseman Al Alpaugh, which included three double plays.

On the offensive side, Steve Kasunic helped out with his first professional home run, with a man aboard in the second inning. His runs stood as the winers, after Victoria picked up a couple of unearned tallies in the first.

Doug Morganti put some icing on the cake with his third homer in the fifth inning and Mussels capped their scoring with two runs in the eighth, driven in on groundouts by Chapman and Alpaugh.

Victoria, which wraps up its three-game set with Grays Harbor tonight, is 10-16, still on the bottom of the Northern Division. Loggers are 17-12.

The team will introduce John Bush, Greg Schultz, Matt Reeves and Doug Hogan, all on loan from Los Angeles' Letbhridge affiliate, at an afternoon press conference today.

Button win

Norm Wallace and John Pierpoint are being extremely stingy with the senior golfers gold buttons.

The Uplands pair successfully defended the buttons for the fifth time Wednesday beating Tony Parsons and Gordon Terry of Glen Meadows 2 up at Cedar Hill.

Eaton will race tonight

Ron Eaton has cooled off and won't be leaving Victoria in a huff. At least not until after tonight's International Driver's Challenge race at Western Speedway.

The Tacoma driver was seething Tuesday night at the Langford oval after being put back from first to third place in the 75-lap main, the second race on the six-race series for open super-stocks.

Eaton crossed the finish line first in his 1972 Ventura but he bumped front-runner George Stuart of Campbell River to get there and was penalized two positions.

Stuart, who had passed Eaton on the 74th lap, finished third and was bumped up to second place while Roy Haslam of Victoria was the benefactor and finished first.

Haslam put it all down to racing luck. His 1978 Camaro didn't perform as well as expected and he would have likely finished fifth if it hadn't been for some opportune spins and Eaton's bump.

Eaton and his crew were so upset after the race that they thought about pulling out of Thursday's program but he still managed to pick up $1,000 and could win $1,300 tonight. Also, pulling out would give Haslam a big edge in the over-all points race.

Gates open at 6 tonight, time trials are at 7 and racing is set for 8 o'clock.

AUTO PARTS — Speedway fans are getting together a telegram to send to George Doonan who is in hospital in Spokane. The veteran Surrey driver suffered a broken back when he crashed in time trials in the IDC opener Friday. The throttle stuck on his new 1977 Ventura and he crashed into the chain-link fencing...A total of 250 signatures, at 25¢ apiece, were garnered Tuesday night and the organizers of the giant telegram are hoping for about 500 in all...Doonan will be flown home by air ambulance later this week. He says he is through driving but Reg Kennedy, also of Surrey, is expected to race the Ventura here tonight...Don Dowdy, NASCAR Northwest points leader, is also expected in tonight...Roy Smith had ignition problems in his new 1978 Camaro Tuesday but it was the car's first run and better things are expected tonight...Victoria's Joe Musfelt is the surprise of the series to date. He had fast time Tuesday, finished fourth in the main event in his 1974 Camaro and is sixth in the point standings.

Stampeders strike quickly to nip Lions

Tagge

CALGARY (CP) — Calgary Stampeders scored the first two times they got their hands on the football and hung on to edge British Columbia Lions 23-21 before 25,606 fans at McMahon Stadium Wednesday night.

Both teams now have 1-1 records in the young Canadian Football League season.

Calgary led 20-11 at the half but the Lions went ahead 21-20 at the three-quarter mark and threatened to take away the game with its patented heart-attack offence right to the end of the game.

Rookie James Sykes run for three yards and veteran receiver Tom Forzani grabbed a nine-yard pass from quarterback John Hufnagel to give Calgary its two touchdowns in the first quarter.

Kicker Cyril McFall booted field goals of 17, 45 and 28 yards and converted both touchdowns to round out the Calgary scoring.

Rookie running back Larry Key grabbed a 10-yard pass and veteran Jimmy Young hauled in a six-yarder from quarterback Jerry Tagge for the B.C. touchdowns, converted by Lui Passaglia, who also kicked field goals of 45 and 19 yards and added an 86-yard single.

Calgary's first touchdown came early in the first quarter when linebacker John Palazeti picked off an errant Tagge pass and placed Calgary at the B.C. 26. Two plays later, Sykes plunged over for the first Calgary major.

Forzani returned a Passaglia punt minutes later and gave Calgary possession at its own 45. Hufnagel used nine plays to move Calgary 65 yards in the drive that culminated in Forzani's touchdown.

Tagge, who went the distance for B.C., was good on 14 of 27 attempts for 195 yards. Calvin Culliver was the best ground gainer for the Lions with 31 yards on eight attempts, while Key was the top receiver for with 86 yards on five receptions.

First Quarter
Cal—TD Sykes 3 run (McFall convert) 2:12
Cal—TD Forzani 9 pass from Hufnagel (McFall convert) 7:48

Second Quarter

Jones sparks Ticat charge

HAMILTON (CP) — Quarterback Jimmy Jones, benched at the start of the game for only the second time in three years, guided Hamilton Tiger-Cats to 16 fourth-quarter points and a 27-23 Canadian Football League victory over Saskatchewan Roughriders on Wednesday night.

Down 23-11, Hamilton kicker Nick Jambrosic got one point back on the first play of the quarter on a missed field-goal attempt. Then Jones, who had languished on the bench for most of the game, took over from Tom Shuman before a crowd of 22,746.

Keyed by the veteran's passing, that included gains of 37 yards to Lawrie Skolrood and 34 to Kerry Smith, the Ticats moved in four plays from their own one-yard line to the Saskatchewan 27. Jones, throwing two incomplete passes, gambled on third down and hit Rocky DiPietro with a touchdown pass, then ran a two-point conversion with 3½ minutes remaining.

Ticats regained the ball one minute later on their own 39-yard line, and Jones took eight plays to move in for another score, this one a five-yard pass to running back John Kinch.

Jimmy Edwards caught an 18-yard pass from Shuman for the other Hamilton touchdown. Shuman later passed to Skolrood for the two-point conversion. Jambrosic completed the Ticats' scoring with a 32-yard field goal and converted the final score.

Saskatchewan, which had dominated the first half behind playing coach Ron Lancaster, lost its momentum in the third quarter with rookie Larry Dick calling the plays.

Lancaster, 19-year CFL veteran, scored the first Saskatchewan touchdown, the other going to Mike Strickland, both on one-yard runs. Kicker Bob Macoritti added the other 11 points with two converts and field goals covering 49, 29 and 14 yards.

First Quarter
Sask—TD Lancaster 1 run (Macoritti convert) 14:08

Second Quarter
Sask—TD Strickland 1 run (Macoritti convert) 5:02

When you're on top, everything seems to bounce your way. It happened to Gorge Hotel Wednesday night.

The Victoria Senior Amateur Baseball League-leaders moved within one half-game of clinching a first-place tie because the ball bounced away from Farmers Construction catcher Ross Cooper in the fifth inning at Lambrick Park.

With two out and Brian Meadmore on second base, Gorge's Rick Shenton singled to right-fielder Ian Hood. Meadmore came around to score when Hood's dead-on throw eluded Cooper.

Dan Van Glyswyk homered in the first inning for the Gorge.

Gordon Head tops Layritz

Dean Purych hurled a five-hitter and knocked in the winning run Wednesday night as Gordon Head defeated Layritz 5-3 in Greater Victoria Little League championship play at Lambrick Park.

It was Area Three titlist Gordon Head's first appearance in the week-long, double-knockout tournament and Area Two champ Layritz slips to the losers' bracket with a 1-1 mark.

With the teams tied 3-3, Purych clubbed his second double of the night, driving in a pair of runs.

Jeff Plecas slammed a two-run homer in the first inning for the winners and added a single. Layritz' Gary Burton collected a single and a triple.

Tournament action continues tonight at 6:30, with Lakehill meeting American.

Bassett signs half-dozen top junior players

Eagleson
... delivers players

TORONTO (CP) — Owner John F. Bassett of Birmingham Bulls, saying that junior hockey in Canada hasn't seen anything yet, returned to Alabama on Wednesday night with a commitment to sign six outstanding teen-age players to his World Hockey Association club.

Bassett said lawyer Alan Eagleson delivered "air-tight" one-year commitments for defenceman Robert Ramage of London Knights; defenceman Craig Hartburg of Sault Ste. Marie Greyhounds; defenceman Gaston Gingras of Brantford Alexanders; right winger Rick Vaive of Sherbrooke Beavers; right winger Keith Crowder of Peterborough Petes and goaltender Pat Riggin of London Knights.

As players under 20 years, all normally would be unable to turn professional until at least next year but Bassett said Wednesday he had little time to listen to junior hockey law.

"As far as junior hockey is concerned, I will continue to defy their laws until they start conforming with the laws of Canada," Bassett said. "These kids can go to jail and drink booze. I don't see how a little hockey is going to hurt them.

"Birmingham Bulls are going to have an excellent and exciting hockey club, I guarantee you that. I've got six of these so-called underagers now. I've got a little more planned.

"If junior hockey operators are upset at the calibre of team they will have for the world junior championships (in Stockholm next year) maybe they should ask the Birmingham Bulls to represent Canada."

Clarence (Tubby) Schmalz, commissioner of the Ontario Major Junior Hockey League, was appalled to learn that Eagleson and Bassett carried out the move they have been threatening for about two weeks.

Schmalz indicated that action was being contemplated against Eagleson.

"Through our lawyer, Claude Thompson, junior hockey is contemplating action against Eagleson for inducing these players to break existing contracts they all have with junior hockey," he said.

"If all we get out of any action is a $40,000 players fee, the development fee owned junior teams when under-age players were legally drafted a few years ago, we're ahead of the game."

Eagleson, who said earlier he considered the junior contract illegal, reiterated that stand Wednesday.

"It doesn't really concern me what junior hockey says and does," he said. "As a laywer representing hockey players I have a service to provide. I'm not signing the contracts, the players are.

"I met the players and their parents today (Wednesday) and we agreed unanimously that it was their better interests to sign one-year contracts with the Mr. Bassett and the Birmingham Bulls. . .."

The contracts for the six players expire in one year, allowing the players the freedom to entertain offers from the National Hockey League when the older league conducts its junior draft in June, 1979.

Fort Tilden triumphs

Fort Tilden, owned by Saanich racing enthusiast Bud Michell, won his second straight feature at Sandown Park on Wednesday, coming from behind to nip Deacon Brodie at the wire in the B.C. Racing Commission Pace.

The seven-year-old bay horse came from fifth place in the one-mile race to take top money of $600 while equalling the track record of 2:04. Deacon Brodie had won six of his previous seven starts at the Sidney strip, the last five in a row.

Commission chairman R. Bruce Harvey of Vancouver presented the trophy to Michell in the winner's circle. Fort Tilden had won his first race here on Friday after finishing second in three straight efforts.

The combination of Fort Tilden (6-5) and Deacon Brodie (9-5) returned $14.20 for a $2 Exactor, well below the whopping payoff in the first race.

In the opener on the eight-race card, 7-1 shot Senga Leo, out of the money in his last four starts here, teamed with Billy Adios, winless in 21 outings this year, to pay $692.60, the third-highest Exactor in the first 27 days of the 57-day meet.

Leading-driver Keith Linton, listed as 'lessee' of Fort Tilden, won one other race to take his meet-leading total to 36.

All-Stars prepare for Babe Ruth finals

Prince George-bound, the Esquimalt Kiwanis Babe Ruth All-Stars leave this weekend for the eight-team B.C. championship in the northern city. Esquimalt and Comox Valley are the Island representatives in the double-knockout affair which starts Tuesday and ends July 30 with the provincial champion advancing to the regional final in Miles City, Montana. Esquimalt plays Coquitlam in the tournament opener and Comox Valley meets Prince George. Members of the All-Stars are, back left: Miles Webster, coach, Ali Millard, Murray Klassen, Steve LaPointe, Dallas Moen, Derrick Sitar, Ron Hill, Ken Campbell, Tom Kelly, manager; front left: Tom Baker, Gord Marshall, Ed Nelms, Mike Bull, Robbie Marshall, batboy, Barry Parsons, Leon Christensen, Ted Stewart, Tom Woods, captain. Not pictured is coach Bill Newburg.

Reggie taking it easy

NEW YORK (AP) — New York Yankee star Reggie Jackson is reported to be in San Diego, turning his suspension from the American League baseball team into a vacation with friends.

Jackson's roommate, who shares an Oakland home with the controversial slugger, said Wednesday that Reggie never came to his Oakland apartment. The friend, who refused to be identified, said Jackson caught a plane Tuesday from San Francisco to San Diego, where he is staying with unnamed friends.

San Diego was the site of last Tuesday's All-Star game, which Jackson passed up, calling in sick with a fever. However, Jackson is reported to have confided to friends that he missed the All-Star game for fear that Yankee and American League manager Billy Martin would embarrass him by lifting him from the game after three innings.

Jackson has been feuding with his manager for some time, a sour relationship that reached the bottom last Monday night when Jackson disobeyed managerial instructions by bunting after Martin ordered him to swing away.

For that breach of discipline, Jackson was suspended for five days (four games). The Yankees were in Minnesota on Wednesday night, then travel to Chicago for a weekend series with the White Sox.

Jackson's first game back would be Sunday in Chicago, but Jackson has not been available to comment on whether he would be there.

"He hasn't given any indication that he won't be there," Gary Walker, Jackson's agent, said from his home in Arizona.

Team president Al Rosen also was certain that Jackson will return to the club on Sunday, although Rosen said he has not spoken to Jackson and was not going to initiate the communication.

"We've sent out the necessary papers to his lawyers," said Rosen, who was in New York. "I'm the president of the ball club and he's a player. Now who do you think should be calling who?

"I'm not trying to call him, but I would take his call, just like I took your's.

"I feel absolutely certain that Reggie will be there on Sunday and ready to play."

There was unity among the top Yankee executives in backing the suspension.

"Everybody knows Reggie is close to me. He's a good friend," Yankee owner George Steinbrenner said. "But you've got to back the manager. If you don't, you get to the point where a player can listen to the manager and disregard what he says. Then you're done. You might as well hang it up."

'Little things wrong' with Games facilities

EDMONTON (CP) — There are no major problems with the Commonwealth Stadium track and equipment although there are "a million little things wrong," athletics co-ordinator Ken Porter said Wednesday.

He was responding to a report that quoted him as saying Edmonton had been "stuck" with a second-class track for the Commonwealth Games because of false economy at city hall.

Porter said in an interview he didn't think the city was pinching pennies when it purchased the track, despite reports that the Pro-Turf surface was of inadequate quality.

"I think they tried to do the best they could," he said.

In the earlier report, he was quoted as saying that selection of the track, about which neither he nor fellow experts were consulted, epitomizes the false ecomony city hall and the Games Foundation have sought, despite objections.

A small section of track had to be repaired during construction, and Porter said a portion of the material removed was at least two millimetres short of the required depth of nine millimetres.

The shots for the shot-put event, discus, hurdles and other equipment came second-hand from the Montreal Olympics, he added.

He said the shots and discus had to be overhauled or rejected, the hurdles have noticeable rust marks and the hammer-throw cage is in a similar state.

Porter said that after the Games team trials and invitational events during the weekend, there were two rips in the high jump approach caused by "the force of the high jump."

But he said one area has been replaced and the other likely will be repaired.

Celts deal for guard

BOSTON (AP) — Boston Celtics obtained guard Earl Tatum from Indiana Pacers on Wednesday for cash and Boston's No. 1 choice in the 1980 National Basketball Association college draft.

The 6-foot-5 Tatum averaged 14.3 points last season, playing 25 games for Los Angeles Lakers and 57 for Indiana.

He was obtained by the Pacers, along with centre James Edwards, for forward Adrian Dantley and centre Dave Robisch. Tatum was a college star at Marquette.

The Boston deal for Tatum was made by new Celtics owner John Y. Brown, who took over the franchise this month in a swap with former owner Irv Levin.

HEAR YOU BOUGHT YOUR WIFE A NEW CAR.
NO, I LEASED.
COME ON, LEASING'S JUST FOR BUSINESSES.

No way. I checked this ideaLease by Chrysler and they made a lot of sense for us.

But your wife doesn't drive enough.

It depends upon the kind of lease you choose. The Chrysler Leasing System people showed me the differences and worked out a lease that I can afford to pay each month.

And how long did you have to lease for?

Three years. But I could have had any length of lease I wanted

I don't get it.

You will if you talk to the Chrysler Leasing System people. They make it so simple.

Nixon had promised wife he'd quit

NEW YORK (UPI) — In 1954, then-U.S. vice-president Richard Nixon gave his wife, Pat, a written promise that he would give up politics, a promise he broke as he had broken many similar promises since the beginning of his political career, according to Good Housekeeping magazine.

Despite the broken promises, Mrs. Nixon, who "hated politics," dutifully stood by her husband through his political life, the magazine said, but as a result she "gave up everything I loved."

The article, in the magazine's August issue, said that when Nixon ran for Congress in 1946, Mrs. Nixon made him promise to live up to two "ground rules" that she not be forced to make speeches and that their children be sheltered from politics. "Both rules eventually would be broken," the article said.

The article, adapted from Lester David's book The Lonely Lady of San Clemente, said Mrs. Nixon also confronted her husband in 1954 and "she pleaded with him to give it (politics) up, and he yielded to her wishes.

"On a sheet of paper she brought to him, he wrote: 'I promise to Patricia Ryan Nixon that I will not again seek public office.' He wrote the date, folded the paper and placed the promise in his wallet."

Earlier, at the 1952 GOP Convention in Chicago—the very night Nixon was nominated for vice-president—Mrs. Nixon had pleaded with him not to accept and felt that he would respect her wishes, the article said.

She found out later that night—by a television bulletin—that her husband had indeed accepted, the article said. "Quickly she rushed to the convention hall, and joined Nixon on the platform, smiling, gracious and cool," David wrote.

Restaurants consider it compliment to the chef

Whether for doggie or people, it's still acceptable in the bag

By HOLLY McFARLAND
Colonist-Monitor News Service

The doggie bag, or people bag — according to its use, has become accepted procedure.

Exclusive, expensive restaurants, as well as chains and franchises promoting large servings, recognize its practicality and in most cases have given a stamp of approval.

Whether it is because of a tighter economy, because people are eating less, or because people live alone at home or in hotels, remains a question.

A SURVEY of restaurants across the United States produced a variety of reasons as to how the whole thing started and why it continues.

Patrick Terrail of the exclusive celebrity restaurant of Los Angeles, Chez Ma Maison, espoused the theory that doggie bagging originated as a side feature of American steak houses that epitomize gargantuan portions.

"This category of restaurant hypnotizes the customer with the ethic 'all you can eat for a dollar,'" he claims. "But I prefer it if I never use the doggie bag," he said.

TERRAIL stands behind the European restaurateurs' policy that portions should be just large enough. He states dogmatically that "the concept of a doggie bag is a very bad one."

Furthermore, he says, "dogs shouldn't eat restaurant food, but should eat their own diet every day." By serving smaller portions he says it is easier to control prices, and he summed it up by saying, "to me the best compliment is an empty plate."

AT SARDI'S in New York where theatrical and celebrity people gather, specialties and favorite dishes are not easily transportable. Neither the Italian cuisine of hot shrimp appetizers and seafood platter nor the famous Canneloni au Gratin lend themselves to being tucked under the arm after a meal, or so insists the management.

Nor do many people tiptoe out with a pouch of goodies after their rich repast at The Four Seasons, a sumptous French restaurant on New York's East Side.

OWNER TOM Margital says they occasionally fabricate a special package shaped in different sculptures — whatever catches the imagination of the chef. But he insists that "it is usually for a birthday or wedding cake."

"The act of removing food after it has been created into a special dish is an insult to a restarant geared toward thinking that everyone will, without question, be able to eat everything," he says.

But not all traditional restaurant believe in moderate servings. Luchow's in New York epitomizes the German idea that the customer should always have more than enough.

THE FOOD at this festive "gemutlich" atmosphere is robust and heavily Teutonic. Sauerrbraten with potato dumplings, boiled beef, and various kinds of schnitzels are all on the menu.

At Luchow's the doggie bag is obviously converted to a "people bag." The maitre d' pointed out that especially at Christmas time "people get to the point where they just can't finish everything. In one week we may go through 100 bags. During the holidays we may go through 25 or 30 a day. We use a simple brown paper bag."

IN BOSTON, where Yankee dishes and seafood are featured, there are conflicting theories. Some restaurants say no to fish and seafood. Taken home and eaten a couple of days later, it is not always a good example of the restaurant.

At Boston's Union House, owner Jim White boasted of having "the finest doggie bags west of the Mississippi which are perfumed and include an elaborate design. We even wrap them in a certain way so that there is no leakage. We go through 2,000 in one week and on the weekend, 1,000."

IN THE MIDWEST where you find some of the best beef in the United States, doggie bags, or people bags, have been standard equipment for years.

At Johnnie's Cafe, an Omaha, Neb., landmark in the stockyard area, Tom Kawa said they give customers a bag if they ask, and let them take home what they want. "Usually it's just scraps for the dog," he said.

Summer heat doused with cold soup

By PHYLLIS HANES
Colonist-Monitor News Service

Although some people appreciate cold soups year round, it is during the hot weather that they are most enjoyed. Made of seasonal fruits and vegetables, they can include the classic cold soups such as Vichysoisse and Borscht or new and unusual combinations such as almonds, grapes, and garlic.

Here are some soup recipes that need no cooking and one for wheat germ pancakes that will make a pleasant lunch with a cold soup and a green salad.

CHILLED SPINACH SOUP

- 1 10-ounce package frozen spinach
- 1 cup water
- 1 tablespoon chicken seasoned stock
- ½ teaspoon salt
- ¼ teaspoon celery salt
- 2 8-ounce cartons plain yogurt
- 1 tablespoon freeze-dried chives
- ⅓ cup wheat germ, regular

Allow spinach to partially defrost. Cut into 9 cubes with sturdy knife. Place water and stock in blender, whir briefly, then add spinach cubes and whir stop-and-go fashion until completely blended.

Mix in all remaining ingredients, whirring to blend. If desired, 1 or 2 tablespoons sugar may be added. Chill 1 hour before serving. Garnish with lemon slices. Makes about 1 quart soup or 6 servings.

CHEDDAR WHEAT GERM PANCAKES

- 1 cup flour
- ¾ cup wheat germ
- 1 cup grated sharp cheddar cheese
- 1 tablespoon sugar
- 1¼ teaspoons baking powder
- ¾ teaspoon salt
- 1 teaspoon marjoram, crumbled
- 1 cup milk
- 2 eggs
- 1 tablespoon cooking oil
- Oil for frying

Mix ingredients listed as far as milk. Beat milk with eggs and oil. Combine the two mixtures and mix well. Portion ¼ cup amounts of batter onto preheated greased griddle or skillet. Cook over medium heat 2 to 3 minutes on each side. Oil griddle in between each set of pancakes for best appearance.

Split, butter, and fill with cooked ham slices, garnish with olive as pictured. Serve at once. Makes 10 to 12 (3½ inch) pancakes.

Pancakes may be wrapped and frozen. Reheat in toaster or place on baking sheet and heat uncovered in moderate oven until warmed through.

The following soups are from Peter Buckley's book, Eat It Raw (Dodd, Mead), which contains endless possibilities of raw food combinations. The book also includes advice on seasonings, oils and utensils used in preparing and eating raw foods.

This soup with a Spanish background is rather unusual. It can be doubled, tripled, cut in half. This recipe will serve five.

Chilled soup, sandwich hits spot in summer

ALMOND-GARLIC-GRAPE SOUP

- 2 cups almonds
- 3 garlic cloves
- 1½ teaspoons wine vinegar
- 4 cups ice water
- 1 cup shaved ice
- 1 cup oil
- 40 grapes

Put all ingredients except grapes in blender, mix well until smooth and strain through a fine strainer. Put in bottle and put in freezer, for 20 minutes, but do not freeze.

Peel 40 grapes and remove seeds or use 40 seedless grapes. Serve 20 minutes after putting soup in freezer. Place 8 grapes in each soup bowl and add one large ice cube per bowl, then the soup.

Use untoasted, peeled, almonds. Peeled grapes are thought to be much finer than unpeeled. You decide which you want to use.

UNCOOKED FRESH CORN SOUP

- 4½ cups corn kernels
- 2 cups milk
- 1¼ teaspoons salt

Soak six ears of corn with large juicy kernels in ice water and do not dry. Scrape kernels from cobs. Pour milk in blender and add corn and salt. Mix thoroughly, then strain through a fine sieve, being sure to extract all liquid. Cool in refrigerator. Shake before serving.

Add 1 beaten egg yolk just before serving if you like a thicker soup. You also can use half milk and half cream. This soup is very delicate.

ann landers

Dear Ann Landers: I am sick and tired of reading letters from people calling you names and complaining about something you printed. For example: The Sex Test.

For openers: You did not devise the Sex Test, nor did you endorse it. You merely printed an updated version which was submitted by three Dayton teenagers who felt you had an obligation to your young readers to let North America know where they are coming from.

No one was forced to read the test or take it. Apparently loads of teens wrote to say you were some kind of creep because they scored badly. These same kids call you "Mother" or "My Best Friend" until you give them advice they don't want to take. Then all of a sudden you are a kook, a nut or a dumbbell. To all those sourballs who griped, I'd like to say: If you don't like Ann's advice, keep quiet. Remember, you asked for it. — Tyler Texas Teen.

Dear Teen: Thanks for your loyalty, but actually I don't get upset when readers disagree with me. Sometimes they are right, and when they are, I don't mind admitting it. Please read the next letter. It has an interesting twist to it.

Dear Ann Landers: I was sorry you let the cabal of dissenting mothers change your mind about bathing babies in the kitchen sink. You were right the first time and should have stuck to your guns.

In your first answer you cited the possibility of a baby accidentally turning on the hot water faucet. Well, that's exactly what happened to my child when I bathed him in the kitchen sink. He was severely scalded and I'll never forgive myself. Next time don't be so quick to back off, Ann. — San Antonio Mom.

Dear Mom: At least 30 mothers had the same experience and wrote to tell me about it. This is not a huge number, but enough so that I am printing your letter and repeating my original warning. Mothers! You wouldn't wash your dishes in the bathtub — so why bathe the baby in the kitchen sink?

Dear Ann Landers: Would you please settle something between my husband and me? He actually believes that his brother's wife is his sister-in-law only, not mine. According to him, she and I are only acquaintances.

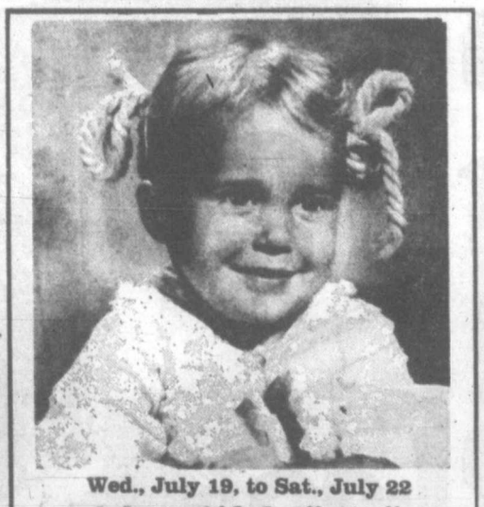

He said he wouldn't take anyone's word but yours. — Waiting For a Ready

Dear W.: Authorities are split down the middle on this, and they continue to argue about it. If it's my word he wants (and I'm no authority), I say she's your sister-in-law, too.

New cooking appliances lean towards practical

Popcorn 'pumper' makes popcorn from steam

By NANCY PHILLIPS
Colonist-Monitor News Service

CHICAGO — Housewares manufacturers showed their most practical side at the recent semiannual Housewares Exposition at McCormick Place here.

There also were a few nifty gadgets such as a battery-operated flour sifter for one-hand sifting; strainers with flush bottoms to fit into drawers for storage; and a popcorn "pumper" that makes popcorn from steam rather than hot oil.

Products now are coming into the stores from the show earlier this year and, for the most part, items are practical, showing concern for the homemaker's limited kitchen space with more multipurpose appliances than ever. There were toaster ovens that cook TV dinners, bake, and also toast bread.

The great success of the slow cooker and the small deep-fryer units has resulted in combinations that can be used for both deep frying and slow cooking. Hamilton Beach division of Scovill has even added another function, the possibility of steaming foods in the same unit.

Lakewood Manufacturing has designed a number of multifunction appliances and had them especially made in Japan. There is the first slow cooker that can be used for deep frying, for the small family, so leftovers do not result; a combination deep fryer-steamer; and a slow cooker with independently controlled twin units.

These are being used for serving as well, especially when hot hors d'oeuvres are offered. Such combinations include apricot and cheese fondue, cocktail franks in one, crab dip in the other; or a soup and a sauce in tandem.

Harper-Lee International has imported the Tavolino tabletop cooker from Switzerland. It is designed to make raclette, the Swiss dish in which boiled potatoes are served in a wrapping of melted creamy cheeses such as Gruyere. It also can be used for table frying and warming of foods with a heating candle.

Ekco has introduced a set of utensils called its Top Drawer line with color-coded handles. Strainers have green tips, spoons blue, etc., so the handles can be easily distinguished in the drawer.

Strainers with flush bottoms fit in drawers and turners are designed for measuring equal portions, with a "spring" in them for easily removing squares of everything from brownies to lasagne from a square or oblong pan. A line of pans and sheets fits toaster ovens, filling a real need.

New ideas were seen in Wearever's Popcorn Pumper, which makes popcorn from steam, rather than hot oil, and the Chicken Basket, which can be used for deep frying and as a low-pressure cooker as well.

Poly-Commodity Corp. has found a way to do canning by steam rather than using boiling water.

Pilot court project to expand

HAMILTON (CP) — The three-year pilot project of the unified family court here has been so successful in its first years that Ontario plans to implement the idea in other cities, Attoney-General Roy McMurtry says.

McMurtry said this week that he is seeking co-operation from the federal justice ministry to expand the court to at least two other areas of the province by the beginning of 1979. The project was inaugurated July 1, 1977.

"I think we've learned enough from the project," McMurtry said.

A spokesman for the federal justice department, which is studying different experimental courts across the country, said Justice Minister Ron Basford would not oppose the establishment of unified family courts.

Hamilton's system is one of the most integrated, with one court having jurisdiction over all juvenile, divorce, property, child custody and support cases.

"I've believed for some time that conciliation is the way of the future," said McMurtry. "The adversary process, while it's a necessary last resort, leads to two parties battling in the courtroom and producing emotional scars that are to no one's advantage, especially children caught up in these disputes."

The Hamilton court employs counsellors who help divorcing partners settle as many issues as possible before entering the courtroom. The court's most serious problem is a shortage of judges and a consequent backlog of cases.

The three judges of the unified court and city lawyers have said a major factor in the court's success has been their co-operation. Lawyers meet monthly with the judges to discuss any procedural problems in within the court.

Youth walks pessimistic road into uncertain, helpless future

TORONTO (CP) — A series of interviews with about 100 young people suggested that Toronto's 18- to 30-year-olds feel strongly pessimistic about their personal and economic future and helpless to do anything about it.

Social scientists and psychologists in the West have written a great deal in recent years about the worsening economic and personal difficulties the future holds because of new technology, unemployment, inflation and the threat of another global war.

As Janis Price, 20, a Hamilton student put it: "I feel the world is on its decline, it's coming down. It worries me a little bit but I can't get too worried about it because it's happening anyway. I feel it is inevitable."

Toronto clerk Wendy Kimel, 19, expressed a similar sentiment: "I enjoy life and I might as well make the best of it. I don't worry about the future. This may sound rotten, but there's nothing I can really do about it."

Almost without exception, the randomly selected young people said they were reasonably happy with the present, but the future was a different matter.

One exception was Toronto articling lawyer Cathy Brown, 23. She said her future is filled with promise. She felt in gear, in command and on the way up.

"I'm looking forward to my future. I don't know exactly what it is that I want to do, but I feel that I've left a lot of options open for myself, a lot of different options, and I feel that's nice."

Her optimism, like that of many others, is based on the 1970s ideal of a successful career, a change from the 1950s dream of a house in the suburbs, children and two cars.

The crucial difference between the two ideals is that the 1950s one was attainable, but the 1970s one is not for most people, said Dr. Gordon Warne, a psychoanalyst at the child and family studies centre of the Clarke Institute of Psychiatry in Toronto.

Warne said young people's pessimism is natural — a sign of their philosophical fascination with life.

"They have the time to explore their world and they can suddenly see the world in a broader perspective and that they are just one subparticle, just a speck. It's fascinating for them."

He added that young people know there is little room for them in the world and are rightly concerned.

Dr. Gregory Baum, a former priest and a theologian at St. Michael's College, said young people are frightened and live day-to-day because they know they lack the power to shape their future.

"I lament the individualism, and I lament the search for immediate satisfaction which our institutions promote among young people," he said.

He was referring to what many social observers have noted — the rise among the young of a philosophy of living for the moment and "looking out for No. 1.

Allan Jeffery, a 24-year-old computer analyst, said: "I like to live for today. I go against my parents, who believe in saving for tomorrow. Today is as important as tomorrow."

Baum explained the attitude this way: "I would regard this as a kind of rejection of the Protestant work ethic, a rejection of the many values dear to our business civilizations, but out of some kind of despair, some kind of hopelessness for the future."

Warne went further: "I feel awfully bad for our kids. I think they're in an awful mess. If they see no future for themselves, then life has to be very, very tough for them."

Baby's death tied to nutrition book

TORONTO (CP) — A book on infant nutrition is being recalled by its publisher from bookstores in Canada and the U.S. because of the death of a Florida baby.

Julian Muller, vice-president of Harcourt Brace Jovanovich Inc. of New York, said this week the book, Let's Have Healthy Babies by Adele Davis, will be reviewed by medical experts.

He said in a telephone interview the Florida infant died after his mother fed him a massive dose of potassium chloride, recommended by the author as a treatment for colic.

"Upon our examination of the section in question we are pretty well convinced, as best we can evaluate it as lay people, that this was a misreading," he said.

A baby in Waterloo, Ont., almost died last fall after his mother read the book and fed him potassium chloride.

Christopher Brown was revived at a Kitchener hospital after his heart stopped. His condition was diagnosed as potassium chloride poisoning. He was transferred to the Hospital for Sick Children in Toronto and has since recovered.

Dr. J. Hamilton, head of gastroenterology at Hospital for Sick Children, said he has never heard of the substance being used as a remedy for colic.

Potassium chloride is a natural salt and is used as a salt substitute for people with heart disease and other conditions precluding the use of table salt.

Your Good Health

Dear Dr. Thosteson: Four years ago I had a skin problem called "tinea versicolor." I've been using the same medicine (Selsun Brown) for the last four years. After using this the spots disappear for three to four months but always come back. Is there a different medicine to keep the spots away for good? — P.C.

I suspect you are a young adult. This troublesome skin disorder most often affects that age group. It is the chief cause of so-called sunspots, whitened areas that do not tan like surrounding skin.

Tinea refers to a large group of skin infections caused by various fungi. Tinea versicolor is so named because of the formation of various-sized spots on the skin, usually from white to brown. They usually appear on the chest, neck and abdomen, although they may pop out on the face occasionally. They are more of a cosmetic nuisance than anything else.

The substance you are using (selenium sulphide) is about as effective as anything available. There are others, such as solutions of sodium hyposulfite and a mixture of sulphur and salicylic acid. These should be tried only with the advice and prescription of a doctor. They can irritate and do more harm than good.

It is best to apply your medicine for three or four days at bedtime and wash it off in the morning. If irritation occurs, it should be washed off soon after application.

This usually prevents recoloring of the spots for several months. Unfortunately, tinea versicolor is notorious for coming back (usually in from 6 to 12 months). It is more common among younger people in hot climates, because they perspire more and become overheated. This may cause itching.

Dear Dr. Thosteson: In facelifts is there a possibility of the stitches eventually pulling apart? — D.J.

Facial skin heals rapidly and once healed it is fixed. The stitches, of course, are removed promptly, as soon as healing occurs. Have no fear of your lift suddenly "dropping."

Eastern refineries unlikely to get U.S. subsidies

WASHINGTON (CP) — Diplomatic and energy officials in the U.S. capital see almost no hope for a Quebec proposal to have eastern Canadian refineries receive U.S. subsidies.

In interviews this week, the cross-section of senior officials replied in almost identical words when asked how the Quebec proposal would work: "It won't."

Since the proposal at this stage is still formally an internal Canadian matter—Quebec is trying to get Ottawa to start negotiations on it—none of the officials would consent to being identified even by department or nationality.

Behind the shield of anonymity, however, they described the idea as impractical.

Ottawa has yet to raise the proposal with the United States.

Earlier this month, Quebec described the plan in its weekly newsletter, which is widely circulated in the United States.

The newsletter said Quebec is pressing Ottawa to negotiate an agreement under which eastern Canadian refineries would become eligible for U.S. oil import entitlement payments in exchange for increased exports of Canadian natural gas to the United States.

Noting that Quebec and Maritime provinces refineries have idle production capacity, the newsletter said that "just across the border, the U.S. northeast can refine only 1.6 million barrels a day although demand stands at four million barrels a day."

The newsletter also noted that a refinery in the Virgin Islands receives entitlement payments for its shipments to the U.S. northeast.

U.S. officials, however, noted that the brief summary omitted several key factors that stand in the way of Quebec's proposal.

Payments to the Virgin Islands refinery, for example, are considered an anomaly that will be corrected in due course. They began because under many U.S. programs the islands are treated, for specific regulatory purposes, as if they were part of the United States.

The entitlement payments are nominally just a method of equalizing oil costs to U.S. refineries, but are acknowledged to be in practice subsidies to U.S. refineries that depend on foreign oil.

In response to previous requests from Caribbean and other refineries, the United States has in the past firmly rejected the principle of making any form of subsidy payment to foreign refineries. The subsidy is now about $2 a barrel.

While giving preference to U.S. refineries, U.S. policy has been to maintain neutrality on the question of which foreign refineries handle the production that U.S. refineries cannot cover.

Officials noted that the largely U.S.-owned refineries in the Caribbean were operating at about two-thirds capacity, the same proportion as the eastern Canadian refineries.

In the Netherlands Antilles, a full one-quarter of the national production depends on refinery operations.

In such circumstances, the officials say, the United States has no valid reason to discriminate in favor of eastern Canada and would come in for severe criticism if it did.

The Caribbean refineries in particular are tough competition for the eastern Canadian refineries, since the Caribbean plants have efficiency advantages in being seven to eight times larger and also enjoy transportation cost advantages.

On specific Quebec hopes to send residual fuel oil or other residual refinery products to the United States, the officials are equally pessimistic.

U.S. refineries use sophisticated equipment to keep their percentage of residual products down to about nine or 10 per cent, while Canadian refineries have 30 to 40 per cent residual products.

Another obstacle identified was the question of whether Quebec could arrange for the additional natural gas exports, which would come from Alberta.

Nice parade of jazz honors Lionel Hampton

207 musicians provide huge pool of talent

By LEONARD FEATHER
Colonist - Los Angeles Times Service

NICE — The days here bring sun without clouds, warmth without humidity. The weather, in short, is ideal; the only avalanche to hit the city has taken the form of 207 musicians (at last count) who have descended on the 2000-year-old amphitheatre and gardens of Cimiez to participate in the fifth annual Grande Parade du Jazz.

Following a familiar pattern, the Parade has grown from seven days and a heavy financial loss in 1974 to 11 days and a substantial profit this year. In effect, this is a three-in-one festival, because jazz resounds daily, from five until midnight, not only in the ancient Roman arena but also simultaneously in two nearby areas of the park. Every hour on the hour the three stages are cleared and replenished.

The talent is drawn from a pool of a dozen U.S. combos and four big bands, six European groups, and a miscellany of some 65 roving players who work both as guests with the organized groups and in small ad hoc units whose members in many cases have never before worked together.

During any given hour you may spend a while observing the singular chemistry of Stan Getz's guest appearance with the Mary Lou Williams trio, then wander off to the smaller stage where Bill Evans has teamed with Lee Konitz, and wind up this segment sharing the joy Lionel Hampton is experiencing at the helm of the most illustrious all-star band he has led since his halcyon years in the 1940s.

Hampton is the epicentre of the Nice quake; officially the entire festival is a celebration of his 50th year as a professional musician.

When time for a Hampton set draws near, the scene is quite unreal. Children have the best view, perched on high branches of trees. Around them are several thousand children of all ages huddled on the ground. There has not been the slightest sign of disorder, and the politesse is pervasive. Beer, wine and New Orleans-style food are available. The only grass I have seen is the kind the customers sit on.

Hampton must be the jazz world's nonpareil communicator; the reaction to each solo, or to the climactic chord on Air Mail Special or Flyin' Home, is happy tumult.

"I'm having the time of my life," he told one autograph seeker. "This band is a powerhouse! George Wein, who conceived the idea of the 50th anniversary, picked the men for me. Most of them are stars and leaders in their own right — men like Cat Anderson and Joe Newman on trumpets, Kai Winding and Benny Powell on trombones, Earle Warren and Pepper Adams and my old sidekick Arnett Cobb on saxophones, Ray Bryant on piano, Chubb Jackson on bass.

"From here we're going to Italy, Germany, Tunisia — I only wish we could keep the band together for an American tour, but it's too high-priced. Well, at least we recorded our concert at Carnegie Hall."

Hampton aside, the core of the festival's attraction lies in its unending series of improbable teamings and reunions. John Lewis, who has a home outside Nice, is working with such partners as Clark Terry, Stephane Grappelli, Hank Crawford — men who stimulate him into playing a driving piano style he seldom displayed in the old Modern Jazz Quartet days.

Dizzy Gillespie, whose regular quartet lacks a piano, is enabled to assemble the kinds of groups he would travel with if he could afford it. Roland Hanna, Jimmy Rowles and Mary Lou Williams were assigned to play piano on some of his sets; at one point his 21-year-old guitarist, Rodney Jones, became part of a three-guitar team with Kenny Burrell and Bucky Pizzarelli. Burrell also made a sublime teammate for pianist Bill Evans, who said: "This is the first time in 20 years that I've played gigs with anyone except my regular trio, and I'm surprising myself by having a ball."

Not all the cross-pollinations work. The sophisticated alto sax of Eddie (Cleanhead) Vinson seemed out of kilter with a lead-footed band from New Orleans led by an allegedly legendary figure called Professor Longhair.

More typical are the good vibes that prevail when a rhythm secton is made up of Shelly Manne, the Hollywood drummer on his first visit here; bassist Red Mitchell, a former California colleague of Manne's who has lived in Stockholm for the past 10 years, and the pianist Jimmy Rowles, he of the exquisite Ellingtonian harmonies, who four years ago gave up on Los Angeles to live in New York.

"I don't really dig playing out of doors," said Manne. "But these special get-togethers make it all worth while. It would be even more fun if the men showed some imagination in their choice of tunes; I must have played Autumn Leaves at least seven times."

The jazzmen's appetite for work, with or without pay, remains insatiable. Nightly, at a bar near the hotel that serves as festival headquarters, jamming goes on until all hours. One night at 3 a.m. Eubie Blake sat surrounded by a knot of young admirers who he regaled with stories about Jelly Roll Morton.

During this rap session Bud Freeman walked by. "Hello, kid," said Blake to Bud, who, having only just turned 72, is indeed young enoug to be Eubie's son. Eubie at 95 is surmounting the rigors of travel better than some juniors who are taking a week to recover from jet lag.

For the customers at Nice, many of them in or not long out of their teens, the Grande Parade du Jazz is a unique and bargain-priced cornucopia. You can take in the entire seven-hour spread for 30 francs, or 20 francs if you paid in advance. (A franc is 23 cents.)

The only worry is the dilemma of multiple choices. Shall we attend the violin summit meeting of Svend Asmussen and Stephane Grappelli? But then we will miss Gillespie's session with Getz, not to mention the blues conclave involving Memphis Slim, Buddy Guy and Junior Wells. Perhaps it would be better to split the hour, attending part of each.

U.S. sky-spy data sought by Chinese

WASHINGTON (AP) — China is behind a mysterious $105,000 foreign purchase order for non-military information gathered by U.S. satellites over much of the Soviet Union.

Officials of the U.S. Geological Survey acknowledge the purchase request but refuse to identify the "foreign applicant" and will not say where the data was collected by U.S. satellite sensors.

They do say the area covered was outside the United States.

These officials, who declined to be identified, said the information picked up by Landsat satellites dealt essentially with various earth sciences, is intended for peaceful purposes and was available to anybody who requested it. They said they did not provide details of the purchases, foreign or domestic, as a matter of policy.

But other U.S. government officials, who also asked to remain anonymous, said the $105,000 purchase request originated with Chinese interests in Hong Kong and that the sought-after 2,800 "frames" of satellite-collected data covered a wide expanse of Russia.

The officials said it appeared the Chinese, who lack a reconnaissance satellite system of their own, were trying to gain information of potential military value about Russia.

The National Aeronautics and Space Administration has two Landsat satellites in circular orbit about 940 kilometres in space. With two satellites aloft in different positions, experts said, each spot of the globe except for certain polar regions was examined every nine days.

Forest camp pair hunted

Two men who walked out of Jordan River forestry camp Tuesday night are still being sought by police.

Missing are John Paul Sunstrum, 22, and William Robert Lowe, 28. Sunstrum was serving a nine-month sentence for theft, breaking and entering and wilful damange, and had been sent to Jordan River last month. He was due for release Dec. 10.

Lowe was serving a 10-month sentence for 11 charges including theft, wilful damage and impaired driving, and had been sent to Jordan River from the Wilkinson Road jail on July 4.

SUMMER YOUTH Employment Program workers Vince Perry, Paul Holm and Gavin Wood prepare greenhouse foundation

N.I.P. solar greenhouse to put bloom on Saanich

Sod was turned Wednesday for Greater Victoria's first solar greenhouse.

Being built adjacent to allotment gardens on Battleford Road, it is part of a program to rehabilitate one of the first settled areas in Saanich through a $359,000 Neighborhood Improvement Program.

The square-mile area, bounded by Harriet, Hampton, Tillicum and the Trans-Canada Highway, contains about 600 low- and intermediate-density housing units.

The eight-foot by 20-foot greenhouse will be open about mid-August, said Daniel Simpson, spokesman for the Centre for Energy Conservation.

The entire project area is a hive of activity as tree-planting along boulevards is under way at a cost of $106,000, new sidewalks are constructed on Hampton at a cost of $53,333 and a $25,000 ditch enclosure program is carried out.

Other work planned later includes the erection of eight bus shelters costing $13,000, development of an adventure playground at Hampton school playground, creation of several mini-parks and the installation of traffic lights and crosswalks.

Four streets were closed earlier this year to prevent heavy vehicles using the area as a shortcut to the highway.

The N.I.P. grants are 50 per cent federal, 25 per cent provincial and 25 per cent municipal, which can be paid with a low-interest loan from the federal government.

Health planners see surplus of care beds

Although statistics show that the Capital Region still needs an estimated 705 intermediate and personal care beds, health planners predict there may soon be too many.

The reason is that 600 new beds are either under construction or have been approved, and the regional hospital and health planning commission approved another 22 beds at the Sidney Personal Care Home, Wednesday night. The commission should proceed carefully to ensure that it doesn't create too many beds, staff planners warned Wednesday.

The approved projects so far are: Sunset Lodge, 118 beds; Lady Minto Hospital, 50 beds; Luther Court, 68 beds; Pandora Baptist, 150 beds; Oak Bay Manor, 60 beds; James Bay Community Project, 70 beds; Mount Edward House, 84 beds.

Planner Murray Halkett said the figures didn't quite tell the whole story, however. Adding to the available space would be about 40 beds in a 150-bed wing now under construction at Glengarry extended care hospital which might not be necessary for extended care, and which could be used for intermediate or personal care. In addition, assistant hospital planner Bill Pennnington noted, the future of the existing Victoria General Hospital was now being studied, and that could include use for some kind of long-term care.

On the other hand, more than 60 beds at the Priory on Goldstream Avenue are substandard, and with the completion of a new 75-bed extended care section there, the present unit should be phased out, as should a number of other facilities in the region.

'Return escritory'

The 76-year-old president of an old age pension group is appealing to those responsible for a weekend break-in at the group's headquarters to return the only valuable item the club has—an antique writing table.

Joseph Haegert, president of the Fernwood Autumn Glow Society which meets in an old city-owned house at 1325 Pembroke, said the break-in occurred over the weekend and wasn't discovered until the 20-odd members went to their weekly meeting Tuesday.

Haegert said the only item taken was an "escritory," or writing desk, a small piece of furniture which folded in front and was painted a greenish-white color.

DWARF STATE IN RED

SAN MARINO (Reuter) — The only communist-led government in Western Europe took office this week to rule San Marino, one of the world's smallest states.

Communists held power once before in San Marino, in 1957, but then they were ousted in a bloodless coup.

San Marino, with a population of about 20,000, is a sovereign state occupying an enclave above the Italian Adriatic coast. In practice, it heavily depends on Italy, with which relations are regulated by a 1939 treaty.

A communist-led leftist coalition narrowly won a confidence vote in the Grand and General Council—the San Marino parliament—to take office Monday and end 20 years of Christian Democratic government.

San Marino, as a sovereign state, runs its own internal and foreign affairs. It is a signatory of the 1975 Helsinki agreements on European security and co-operation.

Its economy is based on tourism and the issuing of postage stamps. But it also receives more than $3 million a year from Italy in return for not becoming a tax or gambling haven.

Cubans lose 1,500 in Africa fighting

WASHINGTON (AP) — U.S. intelligence officials say about 1,500 Cubans are believed to have been killed in African combat, but the death toll has not shaken popular support in Cuba for President Fidel Castro's actions.

In making the assessment, the officials stressed that they have no reliable information on the actual number of Cuban soldiers wounded or missing in three years of operations in Angola and Ethiopia.

They said Cuba's military involvement in African conflicts remains "extremely popular" at home. Other officials have said that only heavy casualties would be likely to cause the Castro regime political problems.

Opposition to the Cuban adventures in Africa has been limited to complaints by friends and families of men sent to serve there, intelligence experts said, adding that there is no organized opposition.

The officials said they have no information to confirm some reports that Cuban wounded are being treated in Soviet and East European hospitals rather than being sent home, where they might arouse popular concern about Cuban military involvement in Africa.

The Cubans are estimated to have about 40,000 military men in Africa, many as combat troops in Angola and Ethiopia. Others are said to have been stationed in several countries as advisers and technicians.

However, this is not a true measure of Cuba's military commitment in Africa since 1975, the officials said, because there has been extensive replacement of troops who serve about a one-year tour there.

IOC compromise to aid Los Angeles

LAUSANNE, Switzerland (Reuter) — The International Olympic Committee believes Los Angeles can still hold the 1984 games by "sub-letting" them to a private corporation which would cover any financial losses, IOC sources said Wednesday.

The sources said IOC president Lord Killanin hopes to discuss this and other possible compromise solutions with Los Angeles authorities within the next few weeks.

Los Angeles Mayor Tom Bradley said Tuesday he would recommend that the city withdraw its bid to stage the Olympics after the IOC rejected its proposal that a private corporation take over financial responsibility for the Games.

Both sides had exchanged several telex messages Wednesday, and Mayor Bradley had suggested a new meeting between city officials and Lord Killanin, the IOC sources said.

An IOC statement said Los Angeles had asked for a one-month extension of the July 31 deadline by which it has to sign a contract with the IOC.

Lord Killanin informed Robert Kane, president of the U.S. Olympic Committee, that he had a heavy schedule but might be able to meet Los Angeles representatives in Europe, it added.

Lord Killanin, who held urgent talks here Wednesday morning when he stopped over briefly on his way back from the African Games in Algiers, said in the message to Kane that he could extend the contract deadline "to August 21 should you or Mayor Bradley request it."

IOC sources pointed out that this would give the committee time to study the situation before the next scheduled IOC executive committee meeting to be held August 30-31.

IOC statutes clearly state that the contract to stage the Olympics must be signed by the host city, and no other body. But Lord Killanin's messages to Bradley and Kane and Wednesday's IOC statement appeared to leave deliberate loopholes which would permit a compromise solution.

Los Angeles could satisfy the IOC's demands by signing the contract, then sub-let the financial side of the games to the private corporation, the sources said.

Bilingualism Rough Rider problem

OTTAWA (CP) — Rough Riders officials have expressed differing views about the necessity for bilingual play-by-play descriptions of Canadian Football League games at Lansdowne Park.

General Manager Frank Clair said Wednesday the issue will be given top priority at the club's next directors' meeting.

But the Riders public relations director, Don Courtney, said the team would lose support from its English-speaking clientele if bilingual play-by-play announcements were made.

"If an announcer said tird down and tree, the place would empty."

But he said the club cannot ignore the French fact and might consider a bilingual announcer "some time down the road."

Commercial announcements have been made in both official languages since 1973 but the description of play is made only in English. The national anthem is played half in English and half in French.

Courtney estimated about 25 per cent of the spectators at Rough Rider games are French-speaking. Riders attracted an average attendance of 26,000 last year.

There are about 700,000 persons in the National Capital Region which includes the Ottawa and Hull areas. About one-third are French-speaking.

A local French-language radio station manager, Marc Lavoie, said recently the team had turned down the station's offer to provide a bilingual announcer.

Courtney argued the team would need someone with a good voice and good knowledge of football terminology.

Courtney said the club is not actively seeking someone to announce the games in both languages and doubted whether he could find someone in the area.

Bob Labelle, who handles the bilingual commercial announcements, has been quoted as saying the club doesn't have to look too far when they have something in their own backyard.

Labelle will be handling bilingual public address announcements at the Commonwealth Games in Edmonton next month. He covered the Riders for 15 years as a reporter for Ottawa's French-language newspaper Le Droit.

Labelle, currently a public relations officer with the City of Ottawa, said Rocky Robillard, who handles the English description of the play-by-play but speaks little French, is one of the best announcers in the business.

Courtney said Robillard has been doing the job for 14 years and one suggestion that might be considered is having two announcers, one for each language.

Play-by play descriptions of action at Olympic stadium during Montreal Alouettes games are done alternately in French and English.

The club was bought by Allan Waters of Toronto from local owner David Loeb 18 months ago and it has made strides in increasing French-language services, Courtney said.

He pointed to bilingual tickets, office personnel, and promotions across the river in Hull, Que.

Young sniper one point off

BISLEY, England (CP) — Mimi Bellefeuille, Canada's 15-year-old Annie Oakley, came within a single point Wednesday of winning the Young Riflemen's Agreggate challenge trophy—in effect the under-25 championship—at the annual Bisley rifle competition.

The girl cadet from Sault Ste. Marie, Ont., shooting against 98 competitors mostly in the 17-19 age bracket, finished second to British cadet Edward Paine by one point at 300 yards. Both had scored 49 out of 50 at 500 yards and 48 out of 50 at 600 yards.

The youngest of the Canadian contingent at Bisley, Bellefeuille has been giving a steady, consistent performance in the major target rifle events.

Her shooting throughout the events that count to the Grand Aggregate, the overall championship, has kept her on the leaders board against 1,200 competitors.

At the completion of seven events, she was 21st over-all with 328 points, tied with Robert Barwise of Charlottetown, P.E.I..

John Marshall of New Glasgow, N.S., was top Canadian in fifth place over-all with 335 points, just two points behind an Australian and a Scot who were co-leaders.

Cadet team commandant, Lt.-Col. Vince Lilley of Vernon said the Ontario girl was doing well in holding her own against some of the top shots in the world and has her team-mates pulling for her.

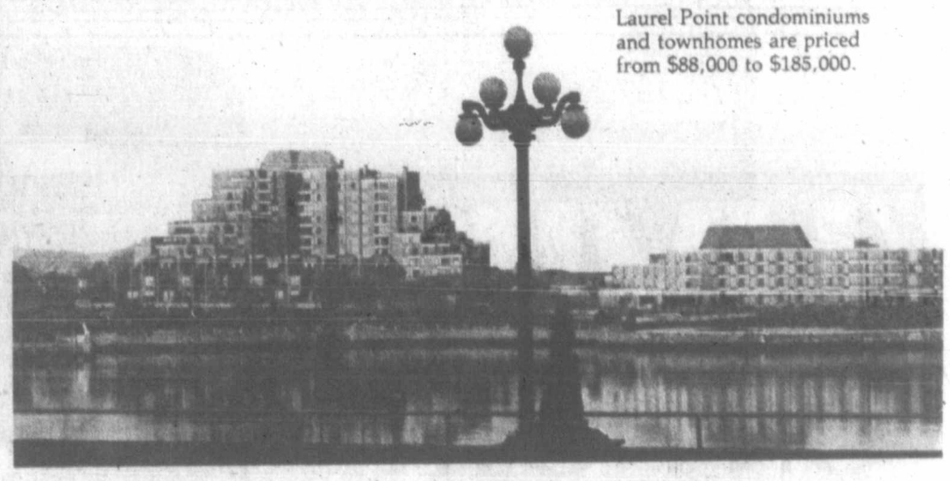

The Canadian cadets came sixth in the inter-services target rifle teammatch at 300 and 600 yards, a competition in which youth pushed the older shooters.

The British Army won by just two points over the British cadets and the Canadian cadets finished 12 points ahead of the Canadian Armed Forces team.

Third party the key no one wants in beer tiff

Canadian Press

Third-party intervention is seen as the key to end the six-week strike-lockout in the B.C. brewery industry, but neither side in the dispute is prepared to request it.

Union business agent John Langley said that while his group would welcome intervention, the union was not prepared to make the first move to untangle the knot which has shut down most of the industry since June 8.

Eric Harris, spokesman for the Brewery Employers Labor Relations Association, which represents the breweries, said the companies didn't seem too interested at present in having a third party on the scene.

Jim Matkin, B.C. deputy labor minister, said Wednesday his department would intervene only if requested by both parties.

Langley said it would likely take such a move to end the standoff in the dispute which had affected 1,200 brewery workers and idled at least 4,000 hotel industry employees.

He said in an interview he wished the provincial government or the B.C. Labor Relations Board would get involved, but that the Canadian Union of United Brewery, Flour, Cereal, Soft Drink and Distillery Workers was not prepared to make a direct request for such intervention.

"Sometimes such a move is taken as a sign of weakness," he said. "But we are certainly not getting any weaker. If anything we are becoming more entrenched."

He said he would have to give some thought as to whether the union would eventually ask for third-party intervention.

"There appears to be some reluctance on the part of the other side to meet," he said.

Harris said the breweries had made two offers to the employees which were said to be final and the companies didn't see any responsibility for initiating additional action.

Four B.C. breweries locked out their employees on June 8 after union members at Carlings in Vancouver went on strike May 26.

Langley said the breweries' strategy was dictated from Eastern Canada but this was denied by Harris.

"I'm negotiating on behalf of B.C. companies . . . reflecting the B.C. climate and the situation here," Harris said.

Aside from the joint bargaining issue, the union says the major stumbling block in the dispute is the breweries' proposal for a cost-of-living allowance.

The workers want a clause that would give them, on a quarterly basis, an additional cent an hour for every 2-5 of a point the Consumer Price Index increases.

The companies have offered a lump-sum allowance which would be paid in May, 1979, depending on the inflation rate during the previous four months.

Don't copy U.S. view on oil use—Gillespie

TORONTO (CP) — Federal Energy Minister Alastair Gillespie said Wednesday Canadians should not adopt the same attitude as Americans who believe the United States has plenty of oil to meet demand.

Many people in the U.S. think their economy is "virtually hemorrhaging from oil, while the fact is that one-half of the oil consumed there is costing them $45 billion a year to import," he said.

"Canadians should also know their oil import bill, while only $3.5 billion a year, is not to be taken lightly and that 70 per cent of the oil ever produced anywhere has been consumed in the last 15 years."

Gillespie told an energy conference sponsored by the Canadian Manufacturers' Association that alternatives must be found.

That is why, he said, the federal government has authorized a $380-million expenditure in the next five years to tap the heating power of the sun and the energy available from garbage and forests in Canada.

Reiterating details of an announcement he made several weeks ago, Gillespie said manufacturers will be encouraged by the government's purchase of their solar-heating systems for new federal buildings.

Meanwhile, a researcher for Imperial Oil Ltd. told the 300 conference delegates the outlook for Canadian oil supply and demand appears more favorable than it did two years ago.

W. A. Bain said there is a good chance that oil needs in Ontario and Western Canada can be met throughout the 1980s, along with "significant volumes to Montreal."

"However, the outlook is heavily dependent on continued exploration success and an early start on new oil sands plants as requirements quickly exceed supply from existing sources."

Bain said Imperial's latest projection is for Canadian oil demand to average 1.9 million barrels a day in the 1980s, about 600,000 barrels a day fewer than it had earlier projected for 1990.

Conventional heavy crude oil supply "is pretty well in balance with normal market opportunities."

"However, because of uncertainties, the least-risk course is to have more rather than less supply."

Ferry-walkout 32 facing penalties

A spokesman for the B.C. Ferry Corp. said Wednesday the crown corporation was contemplating disciplinary action against workers who walked off the job Monday at Horseshoe Bay terminal in West Vancouver.

Ken Stratford, traffic manager, said in an interview that disciplinary action ranging from reprimands to suspensions could be levied against members of the B.C. Ferry and Marine Workers Union.

Thirty-two workers aboard the Queen of Coquitlam walked off the job leaving passengers stranded for four hours in some cases.

When the ferry finally left for Nanaimo after a meeting between the Labor Relations Board and the union, traffic at the terminal was backed up more than two kilometres.

Union spokesman Bob Peacock said the walkout was to protest months of frustration with management over staffing and safety issues, and management's disregard for workers' complaints.

Stratford said one of the issues that led to the walkout centred on the ventilation system below decks.

The dispute, which was threatening to develop into a full-scale work stoppage, was cooled Tuesday by the Labor Relations Board when the two parties decided to resolve the dispute through grievance procedures without further walkouts.

Ottawa dragging on plans to buy $1.5 billion in ships

OTTAWA (CP) — The federal government is falling behind schedule on the $1.5 billion program to buy new ships for the armed forces.

The project team in charge of the ship program will formally ask competing shipbuilding consortiums Aug. 1 to outline their proposals for building six naval frigates.

This comes more than two months after the original target for issuing the requests for proposals.

But federal officials say they aren't worried yet. They say it's still early in the ship program and they anticipate the ships will be delivered on time. The first one should be delivered in 1985 and the last in 1989.

One informant said the project team allowed for some slack or delays in meeting targets but "the slack that's built into this program is fast being taken up."

Five groups have already indicated they plan to submit proposals for the ship program.

MASTERS OF COURT TO SPEED PROCESS

Canadian Press

Attorney-General Garde Gardom announced Wednesday a plan to ease the workload of B.C. supreme and county court judges.

Gardom said in a news release that under the plan, the position of court master will be instituted.

The master, in addition to having the powers of a registrar of the court, will perform many of the judicial duties previously reserved for judges, he said.

Such duties include the power to hear and give validity to wills, the execution of estates and the hearing of amendments to court proceedings, the attorney-general said.

Gardom said the duties taken on by the master will free judges for more time for trials and contested matters, and should speed up the court process.

He said the first master will be appointed in Victoria.

Provincial COURT

Defence lawyer Josiah Wood of Vancouver appeared in Victoria provincial court Wednesday afternoon with 26-year-old Neil Maxwell Kennedy of Toronto, one of the 15 men charged with conspiracy to import marijuana following the largest Canadian pot bust in history last weekend on the west coast of Vancouver Island.

Kennedy appeared with the other 14 jointly charged with him on Tuesday morning before Judge Fred Green and was remanded until next Tuesday for possible bail hearing.

However, Kennedy, his lawyer, and crown counsel Gordon MacDonald appeared Wednesday before Judge Blake Allan and Wood requested that his client's next court appearance be moved up to Friday.

Allan granted the request and Kennedy's brief appearance in court ended less than a minute after he entered the courtroom from the jail area.

A 43-year-old man charged with the attempted murder of his estranged wife in a law office in downtown Victoria on Tuesday afternoon was remanded in custody until today so that he could have counsel.

Jano Robert Lipcsei, also known as Robert Hale, 1655 Chambers, was charged following an incident in the offices of Stevenson, Doell and Co., 816-1175 Douglas, during which a bookkeeper with the firm was struck with a 13-inch steel bar. Darrel Wood, a member of the firm, said outside the courtroom that he heard screams and ran out to see a man attacking a staff member. He said he took the bar away from the man.

Taken to hospital and treated for some broken fingers and head injuries before being released was Martha Lipcsei.

Crown counsel Nicholas Lang requested a remand in custody until next Monday so that a psychiatric examination could be performed on Lipcsei but legal aid lawyer Barry Mah Ming objected and his application for a one-day remand was granted by Allan.

A 30-year-old man charged with robbery with threats of violence was released in his own recognizance in the sum of $1,000 and his preliminary hearing was set for Nov. 30.

Jason Joseph Pierre, 1407 Fort, was charged in connection with the theft of $391 from Field's Stores Ltd., 1420 Douglas, Monday.

Defence lawyer Mel Hunt elected trial by judge without jury after bail was granted by Allan, who ordered Pierre to abstain from possession and consumption of liquor while the case is before the courts.

A 20-year-old who pleaded guilty to stealing money from his sleeping grandfather's wallet was fined $200 and placed on six months' probation.

Kerry David Smith, 3345 Roberlack Road, pleaded guilty to theft under $200 and crown counsel N.K. Varma told the court Smith stole the wallet which contained four $50 bills and some $2 bills June 16.

Varma said Smith admitted the theft to RCMP who were investigating the incident and took the officers to the basement of his home where the money was hidden under some blankets.

Smith said the man was not his grandfather but that he was visiting his grandmother at the time.

Before passing sentence, Allan told the young man, "You better clean up your act."

Allan imposed a 14-day jail term on a 24-year-old man convicted of his second drug offence in less than two years.

Peter Frank Wickens, 871 Fleming in Esquimalt, pleaded guilty to possession of marijuana. Crown counsel Derek Finall informed the court Wickens was checked June 24 at Thetis Lake Park and about 10 grams of marijuana was found in his knapsack. Finall also said Wickens was convicted of possession of a narcotic on Dec. 14, 1976, in Victoria and fined $100.

Gilles Rene Joseph Caron, 34, of Kamloops, was jailed 60 days after pleading guilty to his fourth drinking driving conviction in less than five years.

Caron pleaded guilty to impaired driving and Lang withdrew a charge of driving with a blood-alcohol content over .08 and entered a stay of proceedings on a charge of driving while suspended.

Lang said Caron was followed shortly after midnight Tuesday by an off-duty police officer who noted Caron's erratic driving. The officer, who had a small radio unit in his vehicle, contacted police and Caron was eventually stopped and taken to Saanich police headquarters, where readings of .22 and .23 were obtained.

Lang also stated that Caron was convicted for impaired driving in Kamloops on Feb. 20 and Oct. 22, 1974, and jailed for nine and 21 days, consecutively. He was also convicted of driving with a blood-alcohol content over .08 in Jasper on Aug. 19, 1975, and sentenced to 45 days in jail.

Allan said he would recommend the term be served at the Kamloops Regional Correctional Centre and also put Caron on 12 months' probation and ordered him to attend any alcohol counselling as directed by his probation officer.

Fined for drinking-driving were: George William Price, 56, of 1445 Burnside, $500; Bruce Donald Britt, 37, of 2331 Bellamy, $500; Mark Milton Fisher, 20, of 3177 Glen Lake Road, $450; Alan Charles Boon, 20, of Dawson Creek, $450; Allan Barry Klassen, 41, of 2729 Peatt, $450; and John Frederick MacKay, 29, of 1008 Linda Lane, $450.

Union issues plea in CP Rail dispute

CRANBROOK(CP) — The United Steelworkers of America union has called on the federal and provincial governments to intervene in a dispute between CP Rail and the St. Mary's Indian band which the union says has created economic hardship in southeastern British Columbia.

H. L. Stevens, director of District 3 of the steelworkers, sent a telegram Wednesday "urgently requesting that all parties involved do everything in their power to resolve this dispute in a fair manner as quickly as possible before more layoffs occur in the Kimberley area."

Stevens said eight employees at the Kimberley operations of Cominco Ltd. were laid off Wednesday because of the band's blockade of a CP Rail line in the Kimberley-Cranbrook area and that 130 more employees face the risk of layoffs if the blockade continues.

The band has blocked the land to back demands for compensation for erosion of reserve land, which it says occurred because of a change in routing of CP Rail lines.

About 150 members of the band have halted almost all east-west railway traffic over the Crowsnest Pass by erecting a plywood barrier on the 30-metre stretch of the line which passes through the reserve.

Stevens said if the blockade continues "it could force the closure of the Kimberley operations which could lead to the layoff of over 1,000 workers in the mine and concentrator at Kimberley."

Bob Ferguson, a CP Rail spokesman in Vancouver, said that 129 railway workers have received layoff notices as a result of the blockade. CP Rail has given layoff notice to 69 workers in Cranbrook, 55 in Nelson and five in Trail.

CP Rail has offered the band either $200,000 or 666 acres as compensation for the 72 acres of land lost through erosion, Ferguson said.

John Dutton, a spokesman for Cresbrook Forest Industries, said that more than 300 workers at the company's Cranbrook and Creston sawmills may be told to stay home if the blockade continues much longer.

Curtis talks transit

Canadian Press

Members of the Greater Vancouver regional transit committee met Wednesday with Premier Bennett and Municipal Affairs Minister Hugh Curtis to discuss financing of transit in the region.

Mayor Don MacDonald of White Rock, committee chairman, said, following the meeting, that the provincial government has "an appreciation of the plight of municipalities to have any further costs go on property taxes."

So, he said, financing of transit, at least in the early stages, would have to come from "other sources such as gasoline taxes and surcharges on Hydro."

MacDonald said the government did not make any commitments but indicated a "willingness to discuss all the problems, and to find equitable answers."

Curtis said a further meeting would be held in August.

Chinook, at 10½ pounds, tops Sunburn derby

Dick Sumislawski won the Chinook Club's Sunburn Derby in Saanich Inlet Sunday with a 10½-pound chinook. Les Leacock was second with a 9.10-pounder and Gordon Randell third with a 7.4-pounder.

Hidden weight winners were Bill Bell, Garry Vaughan and Jack Rowe.

Sidney Anglers's Association will hold its Summer Derby for members only Sunday, dawn to 3 p.m., in Sidney area waters. Weigh-in will be at Sidney's Tulista Park and derby tickets, at $5 each, may be obtained at Harvey's Sporting Goods, Smitty's Marina and Cornish's Book and Stationery.

Students hustling but jobs still rare

VANCOUVER (CP) — A city restaurant manager says he expects to receive about 1,000 applications to fill 75 part-time jobs as students continue to hustle for summer jobs.

Barry Miazja, manager of Wendy's Old Fashioned Hamburgers, said that by Tuesday morning about 200 persons had lined up in front of his restaurant to apply for the jobs.

And the restaurant is not even scheduled to open until the middle of August.

A 24-year-old woman, who said she has been looking for part-time work for about 18 months, was among those seeking the positions, which pay the minimum wage of $2.60.

"If I don't get hired here, I'll just keep looking," she said.

Susan Thom, an employee of the federal government's summer youth employment program, said those who did not get hired should keep looking.

"If they're really persistent in finding a job, they will find something, because there are jobs out there."

She said student registration in the Lower Mainland wasup by 29 per cent so far this year over the same period last year. About 5,600 of the 25,000 students registered with her office have found jobs.

She said also that although that represents a 19-per-cent placement increase over the same 1977 period, the picture for the whole region was bleak.

Only 12,900 of the 53,000 B.C. and Yukon students registered with student employment centres had been placed, Ms. Thom said.

She added, however, that the figures also included students who had found work on their own without notifying the offices, and students who were not actively looking for work.

Welfare shuffle runs into snag

Canadian Press

Human Resources Minister William Vander Zalm said Wednesday his scheme to move Vancouver-area welfare recipients to the Interior and northern B.C. has run into a snag.

Vander Zalm said in an interview that while there were many single persons receiving social assistance who could be relocated, and while many jobs exist outside Vancouver, there was no accommodation for the workers.

He said his ministry was working on the problem but did not know how long it would take before it was resolved.

The minister said on June 15 that thousands of welfare recipients would be encouraged—and forced if necessary—to leave Vancouver in an effort to keep them from a life of drugs, liquor and prostitution.

As part of this plan, he said that native Indians would be better off returning to their reserves.

Vander Zalm said he wanted to resolve the problem before this fall because downtown Vancouver was in an emergency situation.

Baby tossed into bushes —AP

This tiny tot was found this week crying in a clump of bushes near Fresno, Calif., about two hours after she was born. Officials said scrapes and scratches on her indicated she had been tossed from a car. But the infant, held by nurse Margaret Casaburri, is reported recovering well in children's hospital.

Parents fight for Laetrile

BOSTON (AP) — The parents of two-year-old leukemia victim Chad Green have asked a U.S. federal court for custody of the child so they can halt court-ordered chemotherapy that doctors say has resulted in remission of the cancer.

The parents have said they want their son to be treated with Laetrile.

There was no immediate action on the suit because Chief Judge Andrew Caffrey was out of town.

An affidavit accompanying the petition from Dr. Philip Binzel of Washington Court House, Ohio, said that "not only does nutritional therapy offer a viable alternative in the treatment of cancer, but it is also a better method than the 'orthodox' therapy."

There was no mention in the documents of Laetrile, which is believed by some supporters to be a vitamin that can be used in so-called nutritional therapy. The substance, found in apricot and peach pits, is backed by some as a cancer cure, although the U.S. Food and Drug Administration says there is no proof of its medicinal value.

Lawyer George Donovan filed the Green's petition after the Massachusetts Supreme Court unanimously upheld a lower court decision making Chad a temporary ward of the state to ensure his chemotherapy would continue.

Doctors say the child would die without the treatment.

The Greens halted Chad's chemotherapy last November. Since he resumed treatment in February, his leukemia has gone into remission, both the parents and the hospital report. Remission indicates a lessening or disappearance of symptoms, but not necessarily a cure.

Assistant Attorney-General Jonathan Brant asked the court to dismiss the suit. He represented the state department of public welfare, which has legal custody of Chad, although the state court decisions allowed the boy to remain with his parents.

Court acquits RCMP officer

VANCOUVER (CP) — A Burnaby RCMP drug officer has been acquitted in provincial court of assault causing bodily harm.

Constable Kenneth Charles Gates, 26, a seven-year member of the force, was accused of breaking the arm of Therese Pare, 22, during an arrest.

Judge H. J. McGivern ruled after a one-day trial that he believed the officer did not attempt to injure the woman and that Gates would have been justified in reacting angrily because Pare refused to stop pulling his hair.

Abductor kills self, girl jumps from car

MAPLE CREEK, Sask. (CP) — A 13-hour hostage-taking incident ended Wednesday when the abductor of a 16-year-old girl killed himself with a shotgun blast while driving a getaway car.

RCMP in Brooks, Alta., said the girl jumped from the car seconds later while the vehicle was still moving at about 40 kilometres an hour.

Earlier RCMP reports said the girl had jumped before the suspect fired the blast.

The incident, which began Tuesday night in Brooks, led police on a 520-kilometre chase through southern Alberta. It ended late Wednesday morning at a police roadblock on the Trans-Canada Highway about 15 kilometres west of this southern Saskatchewan community near the Alberta border.

Various municipal police forces, RCMP cars and an RCMP helicopter were involved in the pursuit.

The suspect, whose name was not immediately available, shot himself in the chest. He was believed to be about 20 years old and a resident of London, Ont.

The incident began with an armed robbery at the Eastbrook Motel in Brooks, where the girl, whose name was not released, works as a waitress.

Nicole Boily, a motel employee, said two motel guests returned to the restaurant after a meal and ordered 15 guests to lie on the floor and empty their wallets.

The waitress was ordered to collect the money from the guests and Steve Ellerton, motel manager, was told to open the safe.

Mrs. Boily said the two men took about $1,000 in cash from the motel and about $150 from the guests.

They then took the waitress as hostage despite objections from Ellerton.

"He offered to go with them, but they took her," Mrs. Boily said.

The two men and their hostage, pursued by several RCMP vehicles, drove Ellerton's car along the Trans-Canada Highway to Calgary, about 160 kilometres to the northwest. City police took over the surveillance and were led through city streets for three hours before one of the men left the car.

Lottery game snagged

VANCOUVER (CP) — Provincial Secretary Grace McCarthy said Wednesday that the four western provinces had gone about as far as they could go in their fight with the federal government over who should play the lottery game.

"We're at a stand-off and there's very little, if any room for negotiation," she said in an interview. "The only hope is that Prime Minister Trudeau will take a second look and speak to his cabinet."

The minister made the comments folowing a two-hour closed meeting with officials of the Western Lottery Foundation. Representatives from the four western provinces were present.

McCarthy said the intrusion of the federal government into the provincial lottery business was the top item on the agenda but the frequency and quality of the Western Express lottery was also discussed.

The foundation is opposed to the federal government's plans to introduce a $1 million computerized lottery scheme as well as its planned extension of the $10 Loto Canada draws beyond 1979.

"It's ludicrous to have two jurisdictions fighting over the same territory," Mrs. McCarthy said.

The western provinces have no intention of abandoning the Provincial and Western Express lotteries but will stick to their plan to boycott Loto Canada by asking all distributors to quit handling the tickets, Mrs. McCarthy said.

She said the B.C. government made $10 million on the lottery tickets which was used for charitable, social and medical projects.

Sky-high beds not for Canada

VANCOUVER (CP) — Spokesmen for Canadian airlines said Tuesday they did not plan to follow Japan Air Lines' decision to provide beds in first-class lounge areas of their Boeing 747 aircraft.

Jim McKeachie, of CP Air, said that although his company was watching JAL's changes with interest, it had already converted all its first-class lounges to economy seats and had no plans of putting in beds.

Air Canada spokesman Christine Saunders said the airline had no intention of converting because the same aircraft used for long international flights were used for short domestic flights.

Canadians to try Everest climb

GOLDEN(CP) — A team of 10 Canadian climbers has been granted approval by the government of Nepal to attempt Canada's first bid to conquer Mount Everest in the fall of 1982.

The expedition applied for a permit to climb the 9,650-metre Himalayan peak more than a year ago but, because Nepal allows only two attempts at the mountain each year, fall 1982 is the first available time.

Roger Marshall, a resident of this southeastern British Columbia community, has been named expedition leader while another local man, Gordon Smith, will act as deputy leader.

'Obsessed' dad can't see baby

LONDON (AP) — A man who hired a London prostitute to have his baby by artificial insemination because his wife could not have children has been barred from seeing the child by appeal court.

The 21-year-old prostitute, who has since abandoned prostitution, refused to part with the baby boy after he was born last June. She also refused to take the $5,700 the man had agreed to pay her, the court was told.

The couple kidnapped the child, but on June 20, High Court Judge James Comyn, on the plea of the mother, ordered them to hand the boy back permanently on grounds the transaction was a "pernicious contract."

Comyn allowed the father access to the child each Saturday for two years.

In Tuesday's Appeal Court ruling, Lord Justice Roger Ormrod said that although he sympathized with the 29-year-old father, he believed granting him access to the child "would only perpetuate the most artificial situation."

The judge said the mother must be allowed to lead a normal life with her son, and she should do it without the presence of an obsessed father.

None of the persons in the case was named.

Convicts pore over prison-swap bill

OTTAWA (CP) — A treaty which has been ratified by Canada and the United States would be lost on the average citizen—but it is being studied closely by U.S. killers in Canadian prisons, and by Canadian drug traffickers in U.S. prisons.

These are people who might benefit from the Canada United States Treaty for the Transfer of Citizens under Sentence.

It went into force Tuesday, after a formal signing ceremony here and it will affect 80 Canadians doing time in U.S. federal prisons and 230 Americans in Canadian federal prisons, as well as uncounted numbers in the provincial and state systems.

People such as Frank Cotroni, a Montreal mobster doing time in Pennsylvania, and John Connearney, a Rhode Island prison escaper who killed a Montreal policeman in 1972, may find the treaty attractive because it offers a better chance at parole.

Cotroni is serving a double 15-year sentence imposed in Brooklyn, N.Y., in 1975 on charges of conspiracy to smuggle about 20 pounds of cocaine into the U.S. from Mexico.

Parole on drug convictions in the U.S. is tied to the amount and value—in this case millions—of the seizure. In Canada, it is tied to the individual's record and the circumstances of the case.

Cotroni may be no better off in Canada than in the U.S. on this basis, but if transferred to a federal prison in Montreal, he would at least be close to his family.

Officials estimate that about one-quarter of the prisoners on both sides of the border are in for drug offences—mostly serious ones. The major difference the treaty will make to them is that transfer may mean a better break on parole, and for many Canada will be the obvious choice.

For killers, the U.S. may be more attractive. Canada's new 25-year mandatory minimum for first-degree murder means that Connearney won't get out of jail until late in the century. In the U.S., he might get a better break. At least he would be near home.

"Over half the people up here are in for crimes of violence," a U.S. official says. "There are a lot with long records.

"They know that prison conditions here aren't really that different than in the United States. They are looking at the parole possibilities, what's in it for them."

U.S. consuls are familiar with the U.S. population here because they must visit U.S. prisoners regularly. One says that about 25 per cent of the Americans in Canadian prisons are in for big-time drug smuggling, and may choose to stay here because of better chances of parole and other reasons.

CAPOTE TALKS OF DYING

NEW YORK (Reuter) — Writer Truman Capote, appearing here on a television talk-show drunk and incoherent, said that he would probably end up killing himself accidentally.

The author, guest speaker on ABC's Stanley Siegel Show, mentioned his friends Marilyn Monroe and Montgomery Clift, whose deaths were attributed to drug overdoses. He mumbled that he also expected to kill himself accidentally.

As Capote began speaking, he explained that he "had been boozing and taking drugs" for about two days straight.

He said he was suffering from anxiety.

To deal with his problems, Capote said he had seen several psychiatrists, and uttered: "They've all been to bed with me."

Capote, who was scheduled to appear for an hour, remained on the program for about 30 minutes.

M. V. Chesnut's Garden Notes

The summer-flowering bedding-out plants we set out earlier this summer have all taken hold quite nicely and have grown away as sweetly as you please. We had a few nice rains shortly after planting, which got them off to a good start, and our snapdragons, salvias, petunias and calendulas are blooming their heads off now, making a grand and colorful display.

The problem now is how to keep them blooming freely all summer long and right into autumn.

The condition of the soil surface is a very important factor here, for during a spell of hot, dry weather, the ground tends to bake and form a hard crust on the surface which excludes air from the roots. With both air and moisture deficient, the lower leaves turn brown and die, and the plant ceases to grow and bloom.

The trick is to get in there with the Dutch or other form of scuffle hoe, or in the case of small, closely planted beds, down on your hunkers with a hand fork, stirring and loosening the soil between the plants so the roots can get their all-important supply of air. This needs doing after every rain, just as the soil is beginning to dry out.

One way of dodging this everlasting soil-stirring chore is to insulate the soil surface from the sun with some sort of mulch.

If your pocketbook will run to a bale of peat moss, a one-inch layer spread over the surface around and between the plants will prevent the baking and crusting. The brown of the peat looks very attractive on the beds, too, setting off the dark green of the foliage and the gay colors of the flowers.

Other good mulching materials are vermiculite (expanded mica particles), perlite (pellets of white volcanic rock), shredded fir bark and sawdust.

Whether you use one of these or the peat moss, you can dig the stuff into the soil during the autumn clean-up, for these bulky materials do a wonderful job of improving the soil texture.

Lawn mowings make a very good insulating mulch too, but they give a rather untidy and unkempt appearance to the beds. Use your mowings in this way, by all means, but use them out back — say, around and between the vegetables and berry bushes where appearances are not important.

Never apply more than a two-inch layer of mowings at any one time, and allow these to dry out before adding to the thickness of the mulch. A too-thick layer of fresh green mowings may mat down and form a barrier through which air and water cannot penetrate.

There is another precaution which must be observed when using lawn mowings as a mulch. Never use the mowings from a lawn recently treated with a chemical weedkiller.

The fumes from the selective weedkillers commonly used on lawns can hang around for quite a long time on grass so treated — up to three weeks with some of the more persistent kinds. These fumes can affect the growth of sensitive plants, and especially tomatoes.

Last year I had several cases reported to me where tomato plants bore twisted, curled and distorted leaves from fumes arising from the grass mulch over their roots. Better take a good sniff at your lawn mowings before spreading them, for the weedkiller smell is quite characteristic. If your nose cannot detect any 2,4-D odor, it isn't likely the mulch can cause any damage to your plants.

Never allow any of your bedding plants to go to seed, for this is just about the surest way to shorten your floral display. Better assign some member of your family to do this deadheading, making the rounds once a week with a basket and scissors, snipping off all faded flowers before they can form seed heads.

Art Buchwald

WASHINGTON —
To the Editor
Izvestia
MOSCOW, U.S.S.R.
Dear Comrade:

I am writing to you because over the years you have used many of my articles in which I have attacked the president of the United States, the state department, the Pentagon, the FBI, the CIA and other agencies of my government.

I know they have been appreciated in the Soviet Union even if you haven't paid for them, because they point out the flaws of our system and give aid and comfort to your people.

But I wonder if it has ever occurred to you that I am an American dissident — an American Jewish dissident, if you will, which probably in your eyes makes me the worst kind.

While the Soviet press has been nice enough to give me so much space in your newspapers, I wonder whether your officials have ever questioned why I am still walking around a free man.

I'll try to explain it if I may. The United States is made up entirely of dissidents, and since there are so many of us it doesn't seem to make any difference if there is one more or one less speaking out against what we think our government is doing wrong.

This does not mean that our officials don't get angry. Those in power in the White House are always screaming that they're getting a raw deal.

Our selected officials in Congress aren't too happy with dissidents either, and every government agency constantly claims that we don't get the facts right — which may or may not be true. But despite their distress the criticism goes on, and the walls of our system still stand.

We go to great extremes to protect our dissidents in this country. We allow the Ku Klux Klan to burn crosses, and the Nazis to hold rallies in our parks. Lately we've even indicted FBI agents for allegedly using unlawful means to find out what our dissidents were up to.

Please don't get the idea that one dissident agrees with another — far from it. It's just that once you start going after dissidents that you disagree with, we believe the next step is that someone will start going after you. This country doesn't have enough courtrooms to handle all the people who are constantly writing and speaking out as to what our government is doing wrong.

You probably consider it a weakness, but we don't have any laws on the books (so far) that make it a crime to defame and slander the state. Both our major political parties are used to it and, if you want the truth, get a great deal of pleasure out of defaming and slandering not only the other party but also itself.

I don't wish to criticize your system but I would suggest that if you permitted your dissidents to speak freely as much as we permit ours to, you wouldn't get so upset about them and have to put them on trial.

Free people can be a pain in the neck to any government but once you have enough of them speaking out, it's amazing how easy it is to get used to them.

As a first step, why not print this piece. If anyone in the Kremlin complains, just tell them it was written by a bona fide American dissident who, despite what he says about his government, can't get arrested to save his life.

Sydney Harris

Thoughts at Large:

● Why is it that when married couples separate, they so often tend to blame each other for the very qualities that attracted them to each other in the first place?

● It's an interesting commentary on our tendency to disparage that we speak of someone's "shortcomings," but the language has no comparable "longcomings."

● Everyone assumes that he somehow deserves happiness, even though he does nothing to generate it in the environment around him; this is like the people who are waiting for their "ships to come in" who never sent any ships out.

● For every one husband who spends overtime at the office because of the demands of business, two do so because of reluctance to face the obligations of domesticity.

● Taking copious notes at a lecture is often less a way of listening than a way of avoiding attention by self-distraction.

● Both the people who look on life as a chore and those who look on life as a lark are victims of the same error from opposite sides — for the purpose of a chore is to gain time for a lark, and the purpose of a lark is to enjoy the fruits of a chore.

● The truth can make you free only if you are already free enough to want it, to go forth to meet it, to recognize it when you see it, and to accept it even if it hurts.

● What nations generally call their "defence policy" is as stupidly suicidal as the motorist who mutters: "If he doesn't dim his lights, I'll give him my brights!"

● Children take things literally, and thus should not be taught that "Our Father art in Heaven," or they grow up thinking Heaven is a geographic locality; far better the reply of Rabbi Kozker to the little boy who asked, "Where does God live?" and was told, "Wherever He is admitted."

● The hardest part of executive savvy is refusing to make decisions that others should make — for the same qualities that propel a man into executive position also impel him to carry the ball more than he should.

● A moralizer is someone for whom morality begins at the waist and goes down, but, in fact, most basic immorality exists above the neck, not in the loins.

● To execute a murderer is simply to adopt his point of view.

● If English were a logical language, the opposite of health would be filth, and the opposite of warmth would be coolth.

James Bacon's Hollywood

HOLLYWOOD — You're probably familiar with the old saw about what makes men want to climb mountains — because the mountains are there.

"Well," says Danny Thomas, "in show business, if you ask a dedicated comedian why he wants to go through all the travail encountered in entertaining audiences — even after he has passed the retirement age — he'll probably tell you it's because the audiences are there.

"What's more, unlike mountains, audiences are vocal and thereby make their wishes known to their favorite entertainers, while mountains can talk only to yodelers."

That's why an artist like Bob Hope "risked his life time after time" to go abroad and entertain troops, Danny says. "It's more than patriotism — there's a big and appreciative audience out there."

The same goes for a man like George Burns, Danny adds. Burns, he says, "could have retired and lived in luxury for the rest of his life," but he keeps performing. "It's also why a clown like Red Skelton will take pratfalls that would cripple a man half his age."

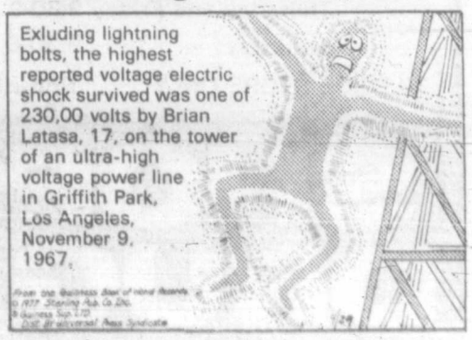

According to Danny, the basic drive that an entertainer has is the desire to perform — which is why television and nightclubs are still treated to veterans like Milton Berle, Red Buttons, George Jessel, Liberace, Jan Murray, Don Rickles and Billy Daniels, to name a few.

"All of them could stop working tomorrow and take things easy," Danny says, "but they won't.

"Comedians would step out on a nightclub floor and do 40 minutes of jokes for nothing. Their 'salary' would be paid in laughs and smiles.

"That's what being an entertainer is all about."

according to GUINNESS

Doctors jam mails in protest

Tanyss Noftle of B.C. The BCMA has traditionally printed its own guide and says the B.C. books represent needless expense and red tape for physicians.

Dissident to get visa

MOSCOW (AP) — Alexander Zinoviev, a former professor of logic who lost his post after publishing a novel in the West, says that Soviet authorities have reversed themselves and granted him permission to leave the country for West Germany.

"This was quite unexpected," Zinoviev told Western correspondents by telephone, noting that only last January officials had turned down his request to emigrate and accept an offer of a teaching position at the University of Munich.

At that time, the 55-year-old philosopher said he feared authorities might bring him to trial on a charge of "parasitism" because he no longer had a regular job.

Zinoviev said he had just been notified by the Soviet passport agency OVIR that they are issuing him a passport along with a visa for travel to West Germany. He added that, as with his earlier request, he intends to go to Munich Zinoviev's novel published two years ago in Switzerland has been denounced by his Soviet colleagues as an "anti-Soviet slander." It is an allegory on the Soviet Union, set in an imaginary country called Ibansk.

Zinoviev said he will leave in early August along with his wife, Olga, and their seven-year-old daughter.

U.S. SMOOTHES ALIENS LAW

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The U.S. House of Representatives has voted to set one worldwide ceiling on immigration to the United States, instead of the current separate Eastern and Western Hemisphere ceilings.

The ceiling would be 290,000 immigrants a year. The Western Hemisphere currently is allocated 120,000, the Eastern Hemisphere 170,000.

The measure was passed by a 396-20 vote and sent to the Senate.

In addition the bill would establish a 16-member Select Commission on Immigration and Refugee Policy to evalate existing laws. The body is authorized $700,000.

In a separate bill, the house voted 411-0 to remove the present limitation of two petitions for immigration benefits to alien adopted children, and remove the present requirement of two years U.S. residence and one-year physical presence in this country before alien children may become eligible for naturalization.

Skip this one —it's boring

NEW YORK (AP) — Some people will do anything to avoid boredom, including picking a fight in a karate school, chewing tinfoil or getting the address of everyone who has ever eaten a Big Mac.

These are a few of the suggestions made by 13 men and women at the fourth annual Boredom Anonymous Convention held this week in Manhattan as part of National Avoid Boredom Week.

Richard Karlen, a dentist from Newark, N.J., read a humorous script about his boredom with his work. He described almost letting a patient choke to death because he was so bored.

"The pharynx became almost totally obstructed with saliva, amalgam debris, cotton balls and 10 frozen fingers," he said.

"My life had become a compendium of insignificant details," he said. "I was being drowned in an ocean of trivia. How many more years could I endure this scratching (on fillings) before one day that amalgam carver in my hand suddenly transformed itself into a razor-sharp machete and the patient at that moment became the victim of a dentist gone mad?"

George Lewis, who founded the 200-member anti-boredom society four years ago, said he is dedicated to helping the U.S. overcome boredom by "keeping the mind in a terrific fantasy."

The small group discussed everything from what they think about when they are bored to jokes about boredom to lists of boring people, states, occupations, films, and institutions.

Ranking high on the list of boring people were Billy Carter, Howard Cosell, Barbara Walters, Bella Abzug, Farrah Fawcett-Majors and Burt Reynolds.

Discussion topics that topped the boring list were the energy and Middle East crises, the New York City fiscal crisis and Jimmy Carter's teeth.

Tipsters recruited with 'terror'

OTTAWA (CP) — A report that uses the word "terror" to describe the state of people the RCMP were trying to recruit as informants went to RCMP Headquarters in 1972 but apparently was not acted upon.

The 42-page report by Marie-Claire Dube-Vani, then a researcher-analyst in the RCMP Security Service's G-4 unit in Montreal, outlines 27 cases in 1971-72 in which the anti-terrorist unit tried to recruit informants.

Four of the cases were referred to a royal commission into RCMP wrongdoing earlier this year on the basis they involved questionable if not illegal police methods. Three more cases were added to the list later.

The royal commission Wednesday made portions of the report available to reporters as well as the transcript of an in-camera hearing June 7 at which Mme. Dube-Vani testified.

A copy of her report was mailed July 7, 1972, to the deputy director-general of the Security Service in Ottawa. Donald Cobb, then chief of the G Section in Montreal, in an accompanying letter described the informant-recruiting program as a successful one that had disrupted one group, "neutralized" some individuals and inhibited others.

Some excerpts from the report as translated by RCMP:

● "Although the subject had not been terrorized by his interviewer, nonetheless he was very afraid. He expected Sgt. (Laurent) Hugo to hit him." "The subject" later fled Montreal after telling associates about the encounter. Mme. Dube-Vani said this "neutralized this cell."

● "The proposed strategy was to impress this subject with the goal to obliging him to co-operate with us. Six investigators in three different cars, therefore, cornered the subject when he was going to pick up his unemployment insurance. . . . The idea was to give him the impression that we were going to terrorize him."

Two Mounties took the man for a 17-hour session in a motel room. "Both of us took turns calling him 'dirty' and a child. We then made him stand in a corner and just stared at him without speaking. Following this he was left alone with one of us, either Sgt. (Laurent) Hugo or Cpl. (Bernard) Dubuc." The man agreed to co-operate but later "disappeared."

● "Cpl. Bernard Blier visited the subject in Trois-Rivieres with two false arrest warrants. He requested the subject's co-operation telling him that in exchange, the warrants would be ignored."

"The subject believed the authenticity of the false warrants and was very frightened when he was presented with them at the offices of the RCMP. . . . The subject quickly consented to co-operate although he hated Bernard Blier."

Mme. Dube-Vani testified that she might have made up the phrase "false warrants."

The final heading in the report—"projects for disruption"—was followed by three sentences: "To plan and to execute disruption against individuals and their organizations of interest to G Section. The tactics mentioned on this topic have not been written up in this analysis."

Moore denies interfering

CORNER BROOK, Nfld. (CP) — Patrick Moore, president of the Greenpeace Foundation, said in provincial court Wednesday that he sat on a seal pup March 18 in a location he believed would not interfere with the seal hunt.

Moore, who was charged at Cartwright on the Labrador coast with interfering with the seal hunt, said that his legal adviser, Vancouver lawyer Peter Ballem, was given no advance indication of his plans to sit on the seal.

Ballem, who accompanied Moore and other Greenpeace members to the seal hunt area off the Labrador coast 200 nautical miles north of St. Anthony, Nfld., on March 18, is also charged with interfering with the hunt. Both have pleaded not guilty.

Fisheries officers testified earlier during a joint trial of Ballem and Moore that the Greenpeace president had been asked three times to remove himself from the seal before being arrested.

The fisheries officers also said they did not hear Ballem give Moore any legal advice or instructions.

But the transcript of a tape recording submitted as evidence Wednesday showed Ballem interjecting the world "voluntarily" when Moore said he would not leave the animal unless fisheries officers guaranteed it would not be killed.

The transcript also quoted fisheries officer Alf Ollerhead, who arrested Ballem, as saying there could be no guarantee the seal would not be killed.

Allen takes cheap route

Woody Allen, winner of an Academy Award for his film Annie Hall, insists he's the lowest-paid writer-director-actor in the business. "The less I take, the cheaper I can do my movies... I don't have to worry about being commercial," Allen said in an interview which appears in the August issue of Ladies' Home Journal. He said that this way he needn't hire stars or write down to audiences.

Dorothy Johnson, a 56-year-old divorcee and mother of four grown children, is adopting triplets. "These kids—Lisa, Dawn and John—are more important to me than my life. Adoption is a way for us to stay together," Mrs. Johnson said Wednesday at her home in Cicero, Ill.

Count Basie will play piano in two countries at the same time when he leads his orchestra during a concert on a Franco-Italian border bridge at Nice, France on Saturday. The Count's piano will be set up to straddle the border. His right hand will strike keys in Italy; his left in France.

Diana Nyad, still without permission from Cuban authorities for her planned swim to Florida from Havana, has sent a telegram of greeting to Cuban President Fidel Castro. Ken Gunderson, a member of the Nyad swim team, said the message was sent Tuesday but no response had been received yet. The swim has been delayed twice and cannot begin until Cuba grants permission.

An expert in the work of Robert Frost pleaded guilty in Concord, N.H., district court to charges of mail order fraud involving forged manuscripts by Frost and other major U.S. poets. Thomas McNamara, 42, former dean of the School of Fine Arts of defunct Belknap College and former curator of the Robert Frost Collection at Plymouth State College, entered guilty pleas on six separate counts of fraud. Many of the manuscripts were set in frames with photographs or pictures of the poets, including Frost, Millay, William Carlos Williams, Langston Hughes, Ogden Nash, Edgar Allan Poe and Walt Whitman.

Claud P. Dettloff, former chief photographer for the Province, has died in Vancouver after a lengthy illness, at 79. Dettloff received international acclaim with his prize-winning photograph entitled Wait For Me, Daddy, which was named among the 10 best pictures of the 1940's by Life magazine. The photograph, showing a small boy running after his father who was going off to war, was taken in nearby New Westminster in 1940 and was purchased by Life for $50.

Andrew Young, the controversial U.S. ambassador to the United Nations, says he may become an embarrassment to his government but never to himself and his conscience. Young was recently interviewed in Toronto by the CBC As It Happens program following the uproar over his remarks to a French newspaper that there were hundreds if not thousands of political prisoners in the United States.

Schnaps smooths sail

FAABORG, Denmark (CP) — Prime Minister Trudeau and West German Chancellor Helmut Schmidt were greeted by some 2,000 Danes Wednesday as they sailed into this small town after a six-hour Baltic Sea crossing from Kiel.

Among the spectators was a small group of seal hunt protesters carrying signs saying "Down with Trudeau." The prime minister later met with them briefly at his hotel. One Danish woman said she opposed the Newfoundland hunt because the seals were so small.

Trudeau explained—with Danish Prime Minister Anker Jorgensen acting as translator—that the seal herds were carefully culled and the kill quota set scientifically.

As for the seals being small, people in Denmark ate small animals, such as lamb which, Trudeau noted, was being barbecued nearby.

Putting lobsters in boiling water was not very nice either, Trudeau added.

The anti-hunt demonstration was the only incident on the trip, part of Trudeau's three-day official visit to West Germany.

As they alighted from the private yacht, Trudeau and Schmidt joked and kidded each other as reporters questioned them about their talks.

Schmidt jokingly accused Trudeau of being asleep "all the time" aboard the yacht that took them from the West German coast.

"Aw, don't say that," Trudeau replied.

Schmidt said they talked and drank schnaps. Trudeau urged him to emphasize that they held bilateral discussions. Schmidt conceded that they talked about Soviet leader Leonid Brezhnev "and the rest of the world." Later Schmidt proposed that they have another schnaps.

"That sounds like a good idea," Trudeau replied.

The two leaders were greeted by Jorgensen who led them to the square of a nearby 18th-century Lutheran church.

In the courtyard, Trudeau looked at the thatched-roof parsonage and outbuildings and drew a laugh from his colleagues when he wondered whether the buildings were part of a hotel where they might be spending the night.

Later when Parson P. E. Severin unlocked the parsonage door for his visitors, Schmidt commented on the locked door and Trudeau said jokingly: "That's because they don't want people like you to play the organ."

Town Mayor Richard Jensen, who discovered only Wednesday morning that Trudeau and Schmidt would be arriving, presented local art books to both of them.

Jorgensen, who had met the Canadian leader on previous occasions, kept referring to him by his surname. As they came off the yacht, Jorgensen grabbed the prime minister's hand and said, "Come on, Trudeau, I will help you."

CANADIAN WOMAN jounalist is given rose by Trudeau as he and Schmidt arrive in Kiel, West Germany, for sailing trip.

Bell-Irving rejects heroin plan appeal

VANCOUVER (CP) — Opponents of the B.C. government's compulsory heroin treatment program failed Wednesday to convince Lt.-Gov. Henry Bell-Irving not to sign the program into law.

Bell-Irving told the Ad Hoc Coalition Against Compulsory Heroin Treatment he was not prepared to become involved in a political matter.

Perigean spring tides cause of severe floods

By PAUL JACOBS
Colonist - Los Angeles Service

SAN DIEGO — Fergus J. Wood has spent the last five years calculating what grunion know instinctively.

He has studied the occurrence of unusually high tides, especially those that have the potential to cause flooding and destruction.

Wood, who recently retired as a research associate with the National Ocean Survey, has traced the history of such tidal flooding through 343 years of North American history.

The unusual tides were once a factor in a decisive naval victory for the British in the Revolutionary War, and they repeatedly have caused significant damage to both the Pacific and Atlantic coastlines.

The long look backward gave Wood the scientific evidence he needed to support his theory that the unusually high tides were caused by a combination of astronomical factors: the lining up of the earth, the moon and the sun, which occurs at both full and new moons; and the closest approach of the moon to the earth in its monthly orbit around the earth.

When the alignment occurs within 24 hours of the close passage of the moon, the result is what Wood calls a "perigean spring tide," a lyrical name for a condition with a potential to cause serious tidal flooding.

Once every one and a half years or so, the coincidence of the two astronomical factors is even tighter — within five hours or less — and the potential height and destructiveness of the resulting tides is far greater.

Supported by history, Wood is now able to predict when such potentially damaging tides are going to occur.

However, he stresses that the unusual tides will be destructive only if they are aided and abetted by strong and persistent onshore winds.

This month the U.S. Government Printing Office has published Wood's 538-page, scholarly treatise on the perigean spring tides. (The title: The Strategic Role of the Perigean Spring Tides in Nautical History and North American Coastal Flooding, 1635 to 1976.)

The book will not be a best-seller — the government has produced only 300 copies — but perhaps it should be.

Anyone with a house on the coast or a boat in the harbor may want to look at a table that predicts the occurrence of such tides and their magnitude though the end of the century.

Wood hopes that the book or at least the tables will wind up in the hands of meteorologists who can use the study to warn harbormasters and authorities in coastal communities of the potential for tidal floods.

Just as he began his work five years ago, Wood proved its potential value. An alert public relations man for the National Ocean Survey asked Wood when the next flood conditions were likely to occur.

The press release, which predicted the potential for trouble on Jan. 8, was sent out the day before Christmas in 1973.

On Christmas Day, Wood's home was flooded — by phone calls from reporters all over the country.

Although the press release pointed out that the effect of the heavens on the tides was subject to local wind and atmospheric conditions, a worldwide flood watch was clearly on.

And flooding there was. Not on the East Coast, but all along the Southern California coastline from Santa Barbara to San Clemente in what the Los Angeles Times then described as a "wave and tidal assault."

It was a splashy demonstration of Wood's theory.

For the next five years, both the theory and Wood himself dropped out of sight as he finished the detailed work that sent him to historical archives and to the U.S. Naval Observatory, which provided him with the astronomical data he needed.

Wood's first encounter with the predictive strength of astronomy happened in October 1937, while he was a senior taking graduate courses at the University of California, Berkeley.

A German astronomer had discovered a large asteroid moving rapidly toward earth. Called Hermes, the Greek equivalent for Mercury, the object proved to be one mile in diameter and at one point was moving at a speed and in a direction that would have meant a collision with earth in less than six hours.

Wood calculated that the sun's powerful gravitational force would deflect Hermes from a fate that would have made it a real-life "meteor" in a collision on a far larger scale than any recorded.

As he predicted, the asteroid missed the earth by about twice the distance to the moon — a 450,000-mile near miss.

(His background as an astronomer leaves Wood skeptical about Meteor, the major disaster film in the making that he regards as a scientific disaster. A large object like Hermes is not a "meteor" at all but an "asteroid," he protests, and it would have approached the earth with a force that would have dwarfed any effort to stop it.)

Although he retired from the National Ocean Survey in January, Wood is hoping to push his theory of astronomical effects on the tides into other areas.

"It is possible," he told the Times, "that there is a greater tendency for frequency of earthquakes" when the moon-earth-sun alignment and close passage of the moon occur within hours of one another.

Computer records of the incidence of earthquakes throughout the world can be compared with the astronomical tables in his book to see if the theory is correct.

It is known that the attraction between the earth and moon can distort the elastic crust of the planet. Since the attractive force is greatest at the time of the spring tides, earthquakes might be more frequent at that time.

In his book Wood takes aim at a popular book, The Jupiter Effect, which predicted that a "superconjunction" of the planets in the solar system in 1982 might result in devastating earthquakes along California's San Andreas fault.

The effect of Jupiter, the solar system's largest planet, on earth is far smaller than that of the moon, which, though small, is much closer, Wood argued.

In the period of earthquakes suggested by the book, the earth's permanent satellite would not be exerting its most powerful effect, as predicted by Wood's spring tide tables.

The heavy weight of the shifting ocean over extreme high and low tides also could contribute to earthquakes.

He notes that the earth experienced a relatively mild perigean spring tide on June 20 and will experience another possibly more severe one today.

When there is a full moon, the earth, the moon and the sun are along a straight line with the moon on the outside reflecting light back to earth. At new moon, the three bodies are lined up, but the moon is between the earth and the sun and shows only its dark face to earth.

In both cases, the alignment of the three (called syzygy from the Greek for "yoked together") reduces the distance and increases the gravitational attraction between earth and moon — and that attraction is the basis for tidal movement.

Those who depend on the sea for their livelihood have traditionally called the higher than normal tides that occur at full and new moons "spring tides" — not for the season, but for the "springing" or "welling up" of the ocean in response to the pull of the moon.

Minority gets voice in merger decision

When two companies, one of which has voting control over the other, decide to amalgamate, minority shareholders seldom if ever get a meaningful voice in the proceedings, short of going to court.

Such a state of corporate affairs, however, gets a unique twist next Thursday in Vancouver. Minority shareholders of Sun Publishing Co. Ltd. will get to decide if that company's proposed amalgamation with F.P. Publications (Western) Ltd. will take place. It likely is the first time that such a procedure has been tried in Canada. (See Page 7.)

Fish unions back on job

VANCOUVER (CP) — A strike that virtually shut down the B.C. fishing industry ended Wednesday when shoreworkers and tendermen voted in favor of a contract offer from the Fisheries Association of B.C.

The workers, members of the United Fishermen and Allied Workers Union, began returning to their jobs immediately.

The 600 tendermen had walked off the job Sunday after rejecting an offer put forward by industry negotiators just prior to a strike deadline. The 4,500 shoreworkers walked out in support of the tendermen.

Fishermen, the third major group represented by the UFAWU, had already accepted minimum salmon prices set by the industry, but were asked last Friday to stop fishing in support of strike action. All fish caught after midnight Friday night were declared "hot" and were not to be processed.

Union negotiators had recommended that the membership accept the latest offer, reached after a lengthy bargaining session that ended early Wednesday morning.

Negotiators had also recommended acceptance of the offer turned down Sunday, primarily because the union was upset with the companies' demand that a single agreement cover tendermen for both the salmon and herring seasons.

Nichol said that issue was resolved when the union agreed that it would not take strike action during the 1979 herring season, at the same time maintaining its right to raise issues relating to conditions in the herring industry.

Any disputes, he said, are to be considered by a joint union-industry committee with any issues unresolved to go to third-party arbitration.

"That basically allows them (tendermen) a second kick at the can," said Nichol. "The companies had wanted to close off that opportunity all together."

Nichol said the union's desire for separate agreements arises from the difference in conditions for tendermen between the summer salmon season and the winter herring season. Tendermen convey fish between fish boats and processing plants.

Nichol said the tendermen will receive a $9-a-day increase on a basic rate of $103 a day.

He said shoreworkers accepted the companies' offer of a 70-cent-an-hour increase. Under the previous agreement, shoreworkers received $6.72 an hour at base, $7.27 for production workers, $7.59 in cold storage plants and $8.89 for tradesmen.

Bolivia orders voting rerun

LA PAZ, Bolivia (AP) — The National Election Court annulled Bolivia's July 9 presidential election Wednesday night and called for another vote within 180 days.

The court secretary read the decision to reporters while President Hugo Banzer and his cabinet met in the presidential palace. He said the court acted unanimously in reaction "to irregularities all along the process" that was intended to restore civilian government after a dozen years of military rule.

The secretary said the court felt new elections would guarantee an expression of the "popular will."

Gen. Juan Pereda, the military government's hand-picked candidate who was declared the winner of the presidential election, asked the court earlier Wednesday to scrap the results and hold another vote "to avoid sorrow and tears for the nation."

Several opposition candidates already have charged that the military rulers rigged the elections.

Pereda called on God to "save Bolivia from hatred and violence," and said he was sure his proposal would have the full support of the people. Pereda, a former air force commander and interior minister, was declared the winner last week of Bolivia's first presidential election in 12 years. He had 50.13 per cent of the vote—with about 70 per cent counted—when the electoral court stopped giving out results last weekend.

Riot-helmeted armed police watch colleagues chop bails into bite size for incinerator

Closely-watched pot broils away

Members of the RCMP's Emergency Response Team from Victoria, armed with 12-gauge shotguns and semi-automatic rifles, stood guard Wednesday while a huge haul of marijuana was burned in the North Cowichan municipal incincerator.

The marijuana was the 13 tons seized off Tofino earlier this week in a combined police-armed forces operation.

The haul, largest in Canada's history and estimated to be worth $20.8 million, according to RCMP, was burned in the incinerator about three miles northwest of Duncan.

Altogether it took about two hours to burn the confiscated drug, which had to be fed into the incinerator in stages.

About 20 Mounties from Victoria unloaded the packages of marijuana which almost completely filled a tractor-trailer unit.

The Mountie detail was commanded by Victoria Supt. Edward Trefry with S-Sgt. Edward Nedzelski, also of Victoria, as second in command.

The marijuana had been stored at CFB Esquimalt since its seizure Saturday morning.

The seizure of the drug and two vessels took place at Shelter Inlet northwest of Tofino.

Each of the bales burned contained about 60 pounds of marijuana. Two bales were spared from the furnace for use as evidence.

Nedzelski said the North Cowichan incinerator site was chosen because the incinerator is the largest on Vancouver Island. There was little visible smoke from the destruction operation.

Meanwhile, RCMP Supt. Scotty Gardiner denied reports Wednesday that some of the 15 men arrested in the marijuana seizure have been

Language deals for Quebec HQs called ludicrous

MONTREAL (CP) — Companies whose head offices for all of Canada are based in Quebec will be allowed to use English as their working language provided they sign special agreements with the Quebec government, regulations released Wednesday say.

All companies which conduct at least 50 per cent of their business outside Quebec will be eligible for special agreements. Firms with less than 50 per cent of their business outside Quebec are also eligible if they meet certain specified conditions.

Reg Groome, head of the Montreal Board of Trade, reacted angrily Wednesday to the regulations.

In a telephone interview, Groome said it was "naive" and "ludicrous" for the government to expect it could control what language people would do business in.

Groome said the regulations amounted to having companies ask for permission to use English, and would ultimately lead to the departure of more head offices from Montreal.

"You cannot regulate head offices," he said.

"A head office is not a local business and cannot be treated in the same manner. It is flexible in that it can be located anywhere."

Groome said the rules would force businesses that do less than 50 per cent of their business outside the

SMOKE ALARM SHORT CIRCUIT STARTS BLAZE

UPPERCO, Md. (UPI) — Maryland fire authorities said Wednesday a fire in an Upperco home was started by a short circuit in the smoke detector.

"Nobody can believe us when we tell them it happened," said Jane Sievert, whose detector started the small fire on the second floor of her house. "A smoke detector catching fire is like having a fire in an engine house."

Mrs. Sivert said her husband extinguished the fire before any serious damage was caused.

The faulty detectors have been the object of a recall drive by their manufacturer, BRK Electronics of Aurora, Ill., but only slightly more than one-third have been returned.

John Farrell of the state fire marshal's office said the faulty smoke detector had been installed with the "wrong size resistors, which could cause smoke to build up in them."

BRK Electronics said the resistor problem in is 749-series detectors could not only make the devices "inoperative but could cause a fire."

Whites jeer Smith: 'How many to die?'

SALISBURY, Rhodesia (AP) — An all-white audience booed and heckled Prime Minister Ian Smith on Wednesday night when he said he agreed to bring blacks into the government because it was the best deal that could be expected after six years of guerrilla war.

"Rubbish!" some members of the audience shouted. "How many more have to die?" others yelled.

In an interview earlier Wednesday with the South African Press Association, the prime minister urged the United States to lift economic sanctions against Rhodesia as a first step toward ending the guerrilla war.

Smith, who jointly heads a transition government with three black leaders, has promised black majority rule by the beginning of the year. A constitutional accord reached four months ago between black and white leaders guarantees the country's first popular elections in the next few months. But it excluded Patriotic Front guerrilla leaders Joshua Nkomo and Robert Mugabe, who

Colonist news services

MAIDSTONE, England — U.S. State Secretary Cyrus Vance announced Wednesday he will fly to the Middle East in about two weeks in another bid to revive Egyptian-Israeli peace talks after the two sides ended an inconclusive meeting here.

Vance came here hoping Egyptian Foreign Minister Mohammed Ibrahim Kamel and his Israeli counterpart Moshe Dayan could agree on the date and place for a resumption of peace negotiations, broken off by President Anwar Sadat last January after he accused Israel of intransigence.

But two days of talks in ancient Leeds Castle ended Wednesday with no firm agreement on the time or place of future negotiations, and an acknowledgment that major differences still existed between the two sides.

"I anticipate there will be further meetings when I go to the Middle East in about two weeks," Vance told newsmen in a statement, but admitted that a lot of hard work lay ahead.

Kamel was quoted by the semi-official daily newspaper Al-Ahram today as saying Egypt had agreed to resume Middle East peace negotiations after Israel undertook to reconsider Egyptian proposals it had already rejected.

In Jerusalem, Prime Minister Menachem Begin tore up a sheet of paper during an angry parliamentary debate today in a gesture of contempt for the idea of any Israeli withdrawal from the Jordan West Bank.

Waving the paper at Opposition leader Shimon Peres, Begin declared: "Now this is a territorial compromise; one part for you and one part for me. Excuse me."

With that, Begin ripped the paper in two, sending the Knesset into an uproar that lasted nearly 15 minutes.

Meantime, special U.S. envoy Alfred Atherton has been instructed to resume shuttle diplomacy to prepare for further talks.

Vance said he would remain in the Middle East long enough to get talks restarted.

Filed delinquency charge

Vander Zalm critic sacked

VANDERHOOF (CP) — The co-ordinator of an independent community resources society in this central B.C. community was fired Wednesday after he filed charges in provincial court Tuesday that Human Resources Minister William Vander Zalm contributed to juvenile delinquency.

Ed Yorke said he was informed of his dismissal Wednesday after directors of the society met Tuesday night to discuss the case.

Yorke filed charges against Vander Zalm and several others for failing to remove six children from an environment which he said promoted juvenile delinquency.

Yorke said his firing came under threat from the human resources ministry that the society's funding would be cut if he remained in his position.

The society provides special services, including family child care workers, to children and their families.

Both the director and vice-president of the society refused to comment on the firing.

Greeks flee quake city in full moon

SALONICA, Greece (Reuter) — Most of this city's 700,000 residents fled the city Wednesday in fear of an earthquake during tonight's full moon.

A strong tremor in Salonica a month ago—on the eve of a full moon—killed 50 people, injured many others and caused severe damage.

Despite assurances from seismologists that a full moon could have no connection with quakes, the rumor has persisted over the past few days.

Carter drug-abuse adviser admits to faking prescription

WASHINGTON (AP) — Dr. Peter Bourne, who heads President Carter's fight against drug abuse, was granted a leave of absence Wednesday night after it was learned he wrote a prescription for a controlled drug made out to a fictitious person.

The leave was announced by Carter's spokesman, Jody Powell, after a day of White House delay in reacting to the disclosure that police were investigating the case.

Powell said Bourne requested the leave "to have an opportunity to clear his name."

"This decision was Dr. Bourne's own decision," Powell said. "The president was informed after he had made that decision and, of course, agreed to his request to leave."

Bourne conceded in a statement that he wrote a prescription made out to a fictitious person in order to supply, a staff aide with 15 tablets of the much-abused sedative Quaalude.

He said he consulted a lawyer and believes "that what I have done is neither legally nor morally wrong."

Powell said he assumes that Bourne will remain on the White House payroll while on leave.

The situation first came to light in an article published in The Washington Post which said Bourne had written the prescription for Quaalude.

Quaalude is a brand name used by Rogers Inc. for the drug having the chemical name methaqualone. It also is marketed under different names by other firms. Quaalude is classified as a sedative and hypnotic substance, similar in effect but not in chemistry to barbiturates. It has been tightly controlled by the federal government since October, 1973, because of widespread abuse.

A spokesman for the U.S. Drug Enforcement Administration said methaqualone prescribed medically to induce sleep in cases of severe insomnia but is sought by drug abusers for its alleged aphrodisiac effect, as well as its sedative effect.

A court clerk confirmed Wednesday that Toby M. Long of Washington was charged July 11 with "obtaining or attempting to obtain a controlled drug known as Quaalude by fraud, deceit or misrepresentation." Trial has been set for Sept. 19.

The Post said police were treating the arrest as a routine investigation of prescription forgery, a crime that covers any prescription misrepresentation and carries a penalty of one to five years' imprisonment under Virginia law.

The Post said Bourne told investigators the person seeking the drug was a woman who worked in his White House office, but she was not further identified.

Bourne, 38, a psychiatrist by profession, worked as Carter's chief drug-abuse adviser while Carter was governor of Georgia. He now holds a $51,000-a-year job as the president's chief adviser on medical and drug-abuse matters.

Beaver was eager

NANAIMO — The Vancouver Maritime Museum has created a major travelling exhibition, The Honourable Company's Beaver, for British Columbia museums, telling the unique story of a unique ship. It can be seen at the Madrona Exposition Centre, Malaspina College, today to Aug. 9.

The Hudson's Bay Company's Beaver was the first steamship in the Pacific Northwest, and was, therefore, capable of travelling to places that were unavailable to contemporary sailing vessels along the coastline from Puget Sound to Alaska.

The Beaver was a side-paddlewheeler built in 1835 for the company so that it could consolidate and expedite its fur-gathering in British North America.

During the next 53 years, this little steamer-sailing vessel accomplished far more—notably the establishment of Victoria as the major trading post for Vancouver Island and the discovery of coal at Prince Rupert.

After serving 24 years for "The Honourable Company," the Beaver was leased to the Royal Navy to act as a surveying ship during the making of the first comprehensive charts and maps of the area. She also maintained law and order along the coast during that eight-year period.

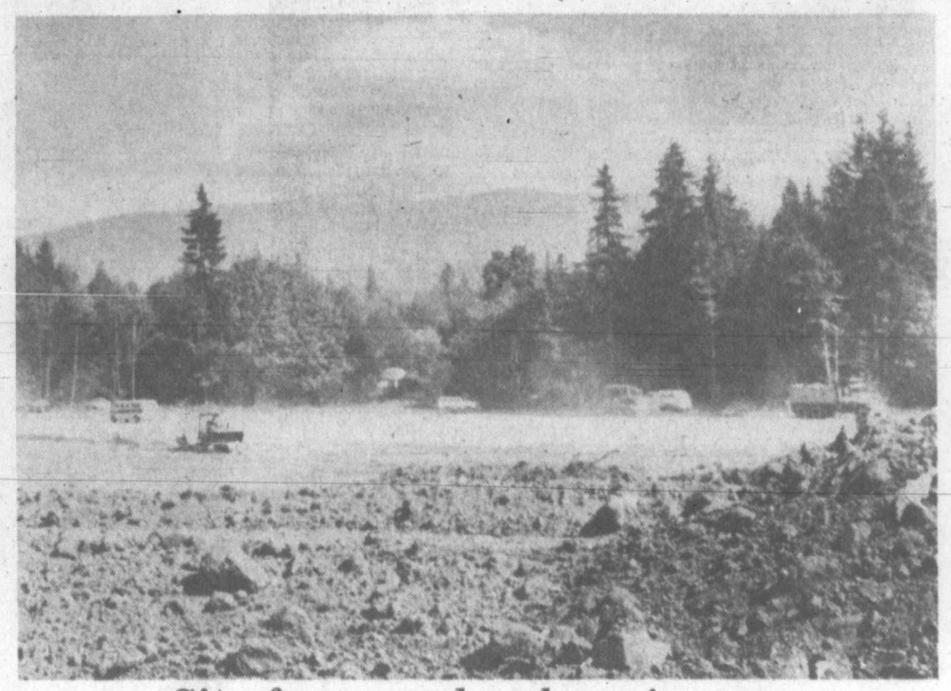

For her remaining 21 years, the ship changed hands several times being overhauled, remodelled, burned and grounded as she served as general towboat, freighter, and sometimes ferry.

In 1888 she ran aground for the last time at the entrance to Vancouver Harbor, abandoned to sit precariously on the rocks of Prospect Point for four years before sliding forever into the waters where she had served such an important role.

The Honourable Company's Beaver exhibition traces the ship's history from launch to final grounding, and beyond.

It underlines her true significance in the 19th century development of British Columbia while serving the Hudson's Bay Company, the crown colony and the province.

It occupies more than 800 square feet of floor space and its 17 panels contain artifacts, models, trade goods, a totem pole, souvenirs, salvaged fragments, charts, drawings, photographs and descriptions.

Site for sore developer's eyes

Port Alberni city council held a special meeting recently to give final reading to bylaws which would allow this site on Johnson Road to be developed as a new 40-store, $10 million shopping mall.

Developer, Royal Oak Holdings of Vancouver, had been clearing site for a period of time while expecting favorable council verdict.

Berton might help drive for endangered Dayliner

DUNCAN — Pierre Berton, well-known author of The Last Spike and The National Dream, two novels about the building of the CPR, might come to the aid of the endangered E&N Dayliner.

If he does, it will be largely due to the efforts of John Cooper, E&N employee and member of the United Transportation Union. Cooper told a meeting of the Committee to Save the E&N that he had sent a telegram to Berton to ask for his assistance.

Cooper said he hoped to get Berton to come to the Island and participate in the 92nd anniversary of the driving of the last spike on the E&N.

Committee members also hope to run a special excursion from Victoria to Duncan on Aug. 13, using a steam engine and rolling stock from the mainland. Aug. 13 is the anniversary of the start of the passenger service.

The train would also stop at Cliffside near Shawnigan Lake, to relive the historic spike-driving exploits of former prime minister Sir John A. Macdonald 92 years previously.

Following the ceremony, the engine will steam the remaining 20 kilometres into Duncan where picnic-style festivities would be provided.

Cooper said the committee plans to approach Premier Bennett and Tourism Minister Grace McCarthy to help get the steam train over to Vancouver Island.

He said the steam train journey would be the start of the committee's push to reinstate Sunday passenger service on the Dayliner.

Cooper said he thought the recent train ride by Bennett and members of his cabinet was successful.

Cooper said his union had been recently successful in getting the Dayliner to run on time and there has been a reduction in fares.

The next step, he said, included getting the Victoria terminal back to the downtown area and away from the current Esquimalt station and commencement of the Sunday service.

"The car has got to go back across the bridge to Victoria, that's where it all started. The Victoria station is only four or five minutes' walk from all the tourist hotels," Cooper said.

A major push is also currently underway to promote and publicize the Dayliner service in the Seattle area, said another committee member, a Victoria advertising manager Rick Trueman.

Trueman said this would be tied in with the sailing from Seattle of the Princess Marguerite. He said that half the remaining advertising budget for the Marguerite is being devoted to the idea of taking the Dayliner up-Island.

He also announced that a dairy firm, which has committed itself to $10,000 worth of advertising promoting the Dayliner, will also be printing a poster to be displayed in retail stores urging people to use the train.

Dec. 13 is the deadline given by the Canadian Transport Commission to the provincial government to prepare a legal case opposing the CPR's plans to shut down passenger service.

Nanaimo showdown

Public hearing has strong reverberations

By DONNA REIMER
Colonist Correspondent

NANAIMO — A defamation of character suit and a possibility of a second public hearing have been raised as a result of a controversial public hearing held in Nanaimo last week.

Mr. and Mrs. Gerry Quigley of Nanaimo were preparing Tuesday to file a writ against Nanaimo Ald. Nelson Allen for remarks at Monday night's concil meeting on the Quigleys' rezoning application for a neighborhood pub.

The pub, proposed to be located at the corner of Dumont and Garside roads, had gone to public hearing July 12.

At that hearing, a large number of residents, mostly from the Metral Drive area, spoke in favor of the pub, while some residents of the Dumont Road area were opposed.

Allen asked Monday night about the possibility of holding a second public hearing because of certain allegations he had heard.

He also mentioned a petition which council could not consider because it came in after the public hearing, and the council cannot legally hear additional submissions after a public hearing.

Mayor Frank Ney said that he wanted to ask the city's lawyers about the advisibility of a second public hearing, to be sure the city was on safe legal ground if it decided to hold another such meeting.

Allen said that he had heard only allegations, not facts, about the hiring of a bus to bring people to the public hearing, and that he wanted the allegations to be investigated.

The Quigley property has been the centre of controversy for some time now, as the application to have part of the property removed from the provincial Agricultural Land Reserve has proceeded through the formal channels and appeals.

Permission was granted for the pub to be located on the ALR land and the rezoning was proceeding by way of a development permit, which would allow only the pub.

The Quigleys' lawyer, Jonathan Baker of Vancouver, said Tuesday that his clients have instructed him to file the writ and take the case "all the way."

Meanwhile, the decision was quick and simple for another rezoning item that had provided controversy at the July 12 public hearing.

The council decided that despite the fact that there had been some controversy among neighbors about a proposed rezoning at the corner of Juniper and Princess Royal to allow a Burger King restaurant, the rezoning application should be rejected.

The decision was made with little discussion.

At the public hearing, several residents near the proposed site spoke in favor of the proposed restaurant, but a large number from the larger neighborhood signed a petition opposing the project.

Final contract now being let

PORT HARDY — The final contract in the construction of the Bear Cove road and ferry terminal is being let, senior information officer for the highways ministry Ray Baines said.

The tender call will be the third for the project, expected to be completed by June, 1979. Bids will be accepted for grubbing and clearing for the final 1.4 kilometres of the road, plus the grading and paving contract for the entire 5.09 kilometres, Baines said.

He added the grubbing and clearing for the final portion of the road was too small to put to individual tender, and a decision was made to add it to the grading and paving contract.

At present, Port Hardy Bulldozing Limited is clearing the central 3.4-kilometre portion of the road, while Fraser River Pile Driving is barging in equipment and gravel to begin construction on the ferry terminal.

Nanaimo meters take measure of city council

NANAIMO — City council taketh away and city council returns — a saga of the 10 parking meters was replayed in city council chambers here this week.

The 10 meters that the council had voted to remove a week ago Monday were returned this week, when a group of angry Victoria Crescent merchants appeared before council to demand the meters' return.

The council had voted to remove the meters a week ago to ease traffic congestion problems along Victoria Crescent that they believed would be aggravated by the closing of the Bastion Street Bridge.

But, said the merchants, removing the meters aggravated their business problems. One merchant said his business had been cut in half since the meters were removed.

Equally upset by the matter was Ald. Gino Sedola, chairman of the council's traffic committee, who said that it was time the council, merchants and public began to look at the city's traffic problems as a whole.

Sedola said that the removal of the meters in question was recommended by a traffic study done for the city, the city's own staff and by the highways department.

He said it was time the council started taking some of the advice it has paid so much for, or the city will be blocked up with traffic.

But, Pierre Hamel, spokesman for the merchants, said that they have no loading zones and that customers will not come to their stores if they cannot park in front.

Sedola said the council was "burying its head in the sand" about the issue, but fellow aldermen outvoted him, and agreed to return the meters.

Lions at bay

DUNCAN — Mt. Prevost Lions Club, the most recent service club to be established in the Cowichan Valley, has scheduled a family fishing derby for its first project.

The derby will be held in Cowichan Bay Aug. 26, and will offer prizes valued at more than $1,300. Special prizes for children, including two 10-speed bicycles, will also be offered.

The derby will start at dawn and finish at 4 p.m.

The derby is being sponsored jointly by the Lions and a fuel company.

Following the weigh-in, prizes will be awarded at a dance to be held that same evening.

Persons wishing to participate in the derby are asked to contact Mt. Prevost Lions president, Bruce Payne, at 748-1592.

Trustees will not ask Alice

By DEREK RHIND
Colonist Correspondent

DUNCAN — The book Go Ask Alice, subject of much controversy throughout British Columbia, is to remain on the shelves of Cowichan high schools, School District 65 trustees have decided.

The book was first brought to the attention of the board several months ago when a parent, Graham Harper, complained that the book obtainable at Cowichan high school library "was mental garbage."

Harper complained that the book continually used four-letter words and detailed the use of heroin and speed and described brutal and sadistic group rapings by its main characters.

Harper at a previous meeting of the board said: "I would like to think that our children are being prepared for a life of dignity, itegrity, uprightness and self respect.

"Instead I see rebellion against authority, easy sex, bad language, rejection of parental or traditional values. One of the causes of this problem is the type of books we have in the school libraries. One of these books is Go Ask Alice."

Harper added: "You cannot build a decent body by feeding it mental garbage any more than you can build a decent body by feeding it physical garbage."

Harper complained that the board by allowing these books to be available to local students "in our school libraries gives them a status and credibility that they do not deserve, not to mention the damage that they are doing to the children's minds."

"We as parents have a right to reject this garbage that you are trying to instill into our children's minds."

The librarian's catalogue at Cowichan high referred to the book as "an important book of innocent candor, that deserves attention."

The board's Curriculum Advisory Committee informed the board that it had held further meetings with Harper, and following discussions it recommended that the policy and procedures for the selection of school library materials drawn up some years ago by the district librarians, be referred back to the librarians for updating and then submission to the committee for consideration and approval.

Once approved by the committee, it would be presented to the trustees for ratification.

The board also agreed to inform Harper that "the CAC has examined the book Go Ask Alice and believes that it conforms to the policy and procedures for the selection of library books and, therefore, should remain on the library shelves of secondary schools."

The board said it recognized Harper's right as an individual parent to request that his child not have access to the book. However, the CAC also recognizes that no parent or group of parents has the right to determine reading, viewing or listening matter for students other than their own children.

The board will also be informing Harper that the CAC will be re-examining the existing policy and procedures for selection of library books.

Relief for Wilkie is also relief to Gardom

DUNCAN — The pressure on Wilkinson Road jail will be relieved when a new correctional medium-security unit is constructed north of Duncan, said Attorney-General Garde Gardom.

He said his ministry and the B.C. Buildings Corporation would be proceeding immediately with the identification of sites and the development of program plans.

Initial plans provide for accommodation for 50 male adults on waiting trial status, a minimum-medium security unit for sentenced inmates, and a community correctional centre to house approximately 20 inmates for purposes of continuing education and employment.

Gardom said that the implementation of these programs on the upper Island is based on an extensive study of present court sentencing trends and population growth patterns.

"It appears from this study that 53 per cent of sentenced inmates on Vancouver Island are from the Duncan area and north. In addition, communities in these areas seem to be growing at twice the annual rate to lower Island areas.

"I just want to say that I am personally very pleased to make this announcement, in which we can say for the first time in many years that the pressure on Wilkinson Road will be relieved.

Adequate corrections programming across the range of services required will be available when these facilities come on line," Gardom said.

"With relief from the current overcrowding at Wilkinson Road which the new programs will provide, we can then undertake the necessary changes in that institution to provide a high standard of remand holding for the courts in this area," he said.

Roxburgh leading by stroke

By JIM REID

Defending B.C. amateur golf champion Doug Roxburgh found himself in an unusual situation following first round play Wednesday in the 1978 renewal of the championships at Victoria's Uplands Golf Club...but he isn't complaining.

A five-time last-day leader...and winner of the Bostock Trophy... Roxburgh couldn't recall, after matching par 70 over the lush 6,278-yard layout, ever having been ahead at this stage of past championships.

After a slow start during which he lost two strokes to par in the first sixth holes, the Vancouver Marine Drive ace birdied the seventh and eighth holes to make the turn at even par. He went two under par with birdies on the 11th and 13th holes but lost one stroke on the 14th and fell back to even par when he missed the fairway on the 18th hole, couldn't hit the green in two and two-putted after chipping short.

There was a scramble for spots behind Roxburgh with two Washington State golfers, Scott Alexander of Seattle and Scott Alexander of Bremerton just one stroke back, another six at 72 and nine others, including two former B.C. champions and two past Willingdon Cuppers, at 73.

In the group at 72 were former B.C. junior team members Sandy Harper of Nanaimo, Dick Zokol of Vancouver Marine Drive and Rob Sherstobitoff of Castlegar along with 16-year-old Rick Gibson of Uplands, Stu Holroyd of Gorge Vale and Andy Girling of Marine Drive.

The former champions at 73 were two-time winner John Russell of Vancouver, a 13-time member of B.C. Willingdon Cup teams, and Bob Mitchell of Quilchena. Dave Mick of Royal Colwood, a four-time Willingdon Cupper, and Harry White of Marine Drive were also at 73 with Ross Logan of Qualicum Beach, Brian Rands of Uplands, Blair Christie and Brian Eccleston, both of Vancouver Seymour, and Steve Chapman of Prince George.

Another group of eight was locked at 74 while 13 were bunched at 75.

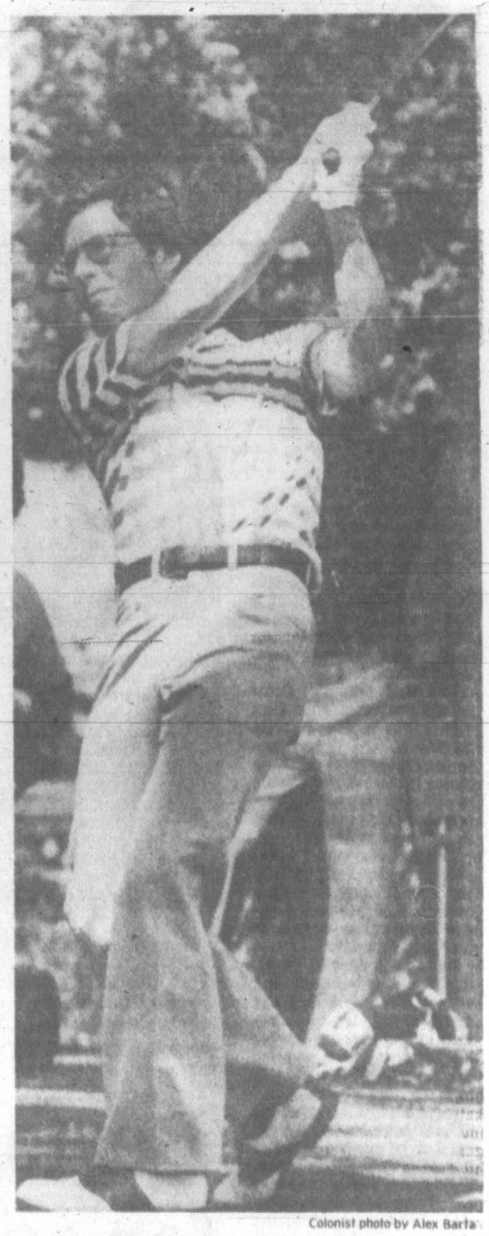

Gibson, Sherstobitoff and Mick all had chances at the lead but fell victims to troubles on the tight back nine. Gibson and Sherstobitoff both were forced to take two-stroke penalties as the result of errant drives while Mick, for the first time he could remember had double bogeys back to back on the 15th and 16th holes.

Second round play starts at 7:26 a.m. with Roxburgh's threesome, which includes Logan and Mike Gray of Uplands who is at 74, slated for a 12:27 tee-off. Several of the other leaders are within a few tee-off times either way.

After play today, the field will be cut to the low-80 golfers with a further cut to 50 and ties to be made for Saturday's final round.

The top 20 and ties among the B.C. golfers will be invited to the BCGA Invitational, July 29 at Squamish Valley Golf club and July 30 at Quilchena Golf Club. Scores for the four rounds of the Amateur and two rounds of the Invitational will be used to select the B.C. Willingdon Cup team.

PITCHES AND PUTTS — It doesn't mean that they will be accepted but golfers who finish the first two rounds here with scores of 151 or better will be eligible to submit entries for the Canadian Amateur...Golf Services, from which several entrants are registered, is a service originated by Ernie Brown of Vancouver and approved by the BCGA and RCGA through which public course players can have handicaps authenticated for tournament play...Only two eagles were recorded during opening day with Girling getting a three on the seventh and Robert Hamlyn, also of Marine Drive, turning the trick on the 15th...The Marine Drive team, headed by Roxburgh, took the lead in the competition for the Humber Trophy which concludes today, with a 297 total. Vancouver Seymour is in second place at 301 while Gorge Vale and Uplands are at 302.

Shamrocks clinch crown

By REG REYNOLDS

They'd better shore up the rafters in the Edmonton Coliseum.

Victoria Shamrocks and Nanaimo Timbermen are scheduled to play a pair of exhibition games there during the Commonwealth Games next month and if they play anything like they did at Memorial Arena Wednesday evening the Coliseum will be in danger of collapse.

The Shamrocks held off a furious Nanaimo rally and and sent the approximately 1,500 fans home happy by clinching the Western Lacrosse Association championship with a 15-13 triumph.

The win, which gave Victoria it's second league title in three years, featured excellent goaltending and shooting, solid defence and unfortunately violent checking and a gruesome fight.

The Shamrocks went into the third period with an 11-5 lead but all the battling appeared to sap a Victoria squad playing it's second rugged game in as many nights.

League-leading scorer Brian Evans and top goal scorer Kevin Alexander got the Nanaimo fireworks started early in the third period.

Evans drew seven assists in the period and Alexander fired in four goals, two of them on spectacular behind the back shots while being checked and the others on screaming low shots from directly in the front of the net.

Evans finished with nine assists to tie the record of 100 assists in a season set by Mike Gates of Coquitlam Adanacs in 1969.

Alexander scored six goals giving hin 78 for the season and leaving him 11 shy of the record 89 set by Bobby Allan of Nanaimo in 1956.

Outstanding goaltending by Nanaimo's Mac Maude and Victoria's Larry Smeltzer kept the score close in the first period which ended 3-1 Shamrocks but Maude slipped for a few minutes in the second period.

Ron MacNeil, who was the outstanding Shamrock with six goals, Norm Baker, Jeevan Dillon and Gord Lyons scored less than four minutes apart to make it 7-2 for Victoria.

Lyons and Randy Noble were the antagonists in the fight that culminated two periods of tension and chippy play. With one second remaining in the second period Lyons and Noble got into a shoving match. Lyons received six minutes in penalwhile Noble was given two. They continued to shout insults in the penalty box and suddenly squared off in a vicious slugfest that left both combatantsbleeding when the officials were finally able to break it up.

Both players were given match penalties and when Ken King of Nanaimo and Dave Thomson of Victoria squared off one second later they were given minor penalties and game misconducts.

Nanaimo took 54 of the 94 minutes in penalties handed out.

Norm Baker, playing with a broken nose suffered Tuesday at Vancouver, scored three goals and had an assist, Ranjit Dillon assisted four times and Jeevan Dillon scored twice. Larry Bell, Joe McCrae and Charn Dhillon also scored for Victoria.

Tej Labh scored three times for Nanaimo, Jim Guerin scored twice and Bob Cool and Roger Dubyna scored once each.

Smeltzer, who came back after being knocked unconcious by an Alexander shot late in the first period, made 40 saves and Maude stopped 42 shots.

Shamrocks were without Gerry Cadwallader who was suspended for being the third man in during the mixup in Vancouver.

Sooke, Seaboard softball winners

The Stuffy McGinnis Men's League offered up a softball smorgasbord at Central Park Wednesday—great pitching, great hitting...and just a touch of insanity.

Randy Jackson of Seaboard Construction provided the pitching, tossing a five-hit shutout to defeat Victoria Athletics 2-0 in the second game of the doubleheader.

In the other game, things were a little crazy. Sooke Merchants chalked up at least one run every inning and wound up throttling Batesons 19-1.

Jackson struck out six in out-duelling Athletics' Ken Fox. Brian Grexton provided both Seaboard's runs with a two-run home run in the first inning.

Mike Banner and Norm Goudie drove in four runs each to help power Sooke. Goudie chipped in a homer and Bob Wilson scored four runs for the winners.

In Heywood Park Men's League play, Hygrade Radio dumped Taylor House Movers 7-4.

Meanwhile, Victoria Athletics dumped Ingraham Hotel 12-6 in a Senior Women's League game at Hyacinth Park and Esquimalt Combos downed Strawberry Vale Juniors 8-3.

Two-out bunt boosts streak

Pete Rose extended his hitting streak to 32 games with a two-out bunt single in the ninth inning Wednesday night as Ken Henderson's three-run homer in the seventh and George Foster's grand slam in the eighth carried Cincinnati Reds to a 7-2 victory over Philadelphia Phillies in a National League baseball game.

It prevented Steve Carlton, 8-9, from recording his 200th career victory.

Rose, five games shy of Tommy Holmes' National League record of 37 straight games with a hit, had walked, grounded out twice, and struck out before he bunted safely toward third.

The Phillies led 2-0 with two out in the seventh before Carlton gave up singles to Johnny Bench and Dave Concepcion before Henderson's home run over the left field bullpen.

In the eighth Rose walked, Ken Griffey singled, Joe Morgan was intentionally walked, and Foster hit his league-leading 23rd home run off reliever Ron Reed.

Elsewhere in the National League, Dave Parker's two-run homer in the fifth inning helped Pittsburgh Pirates to a 6-3 victory over Los Angeles Dodgers.

Vida Blue became the first 13-game winner in the NL and Larry Herndon drove in four runs with three singles to lead San Francisco Giants to a 7-4 win over Chicago Cubs in the first game of a doubleheader. Larry Biittner's two singles drove in three runs as the Cubs scored seven times in the first two innings and held on for a 7-5 victory in the nightcap.

In the American League, Frank Duffy's run-scoring single capped a controversial four-run Boston seventh inning, rallying the Red Sox to an 8-2 victory over Milwaukee Brewers.

Ed Figueroa tossed a six-hitter and the slumping New York Yankees won for the third time in 12 games with a 2-0 shutout over Minnesota Twins.

Trail too much for city squad

NORTH VANCOUVER (CP) — Ray Ferraro hit two triples Wednesday, knocking in four runs to pace Trail to an 8-4 over Victoria's Gordon Head in the British Columbia prep baseball championships for 13 year olds.

The win boosted Trail into the final of the double-knockout tournament against Vancouver.

Dave Duncan and reliever Ian Cameron, who came on in the sixth inning, combined to allow eight hits by Victoria, two of them singles by losing pitcher Daryn Lansdell. Lansdell gave up 10 hits.

Moretti in fine form

There are some new kids on the block and some of the Victoria Mussels are looking over their shoulders.

Maybe that's why Mussels reacted by playing what manager Jim Chapman calls "more aggressive baseball" Wednesday night.

Mussels, who welcome four additions from the Los Angeles Dodgers' farm system this week, halted Grays Harbor Loggers 7-2 at Royal Athletic Park, snapping Loggers' seven-game Northwest League win skein in the process.

Roy Moretti went the route to turn in his sixth straight solid pitching performance, taming the Loggers on six hits while throwing just 98 pitches.

The Victoria-born righthander earned his third win against two defeats, striking out three and walking two to lower his earned-run average to 3.98.

He was aided by some spectacular defensive work, particulary from second baseman Al Alpaugh, which included three double plays.

On the offensive side, Steve Kasunic helped out with his first professional home run, with a man aboard in the second inning. His runs stood as the winers, after Victoria picked up a couple of unearned tallies in the first.

Doug Morganti put some icing on the cake with his third homer in the fifth inning and Mussels capped their scoring with two runs in the eighth, driven in on groundouts by Chapman and Alpaugh.

Victoria, which wraps up its three-game set with Grays Harbor tonight, is 10-16, still on the bottom of the Northern Division. Loggers are 17-12.

The team will introduce John Bush, Greg Schultz, Matt Reeves and Doug Hogan, all on loan from Los Angeles' Letbhridge affiliate, at an afternoon press conference today.

Eaton will race tonight

Ron Eaton has cooled off and won't be leaving Victoria in a huff. At least not until after tonight's International Driver's Challenge race at Western Speedway.

The Tacoma driver was seething Tuesday night at the Langford oval after being put back from first to third place in the 75-lap main, the second race on the six-race series for open super-stocks.

Eaton crossed the finish line first in his 1972 Ventura but he bumped front-runner George Stuart of Campbell River to get there and was penalized two positions.

Stuart, who had passed Eaton on the 74th lap, finished third and was bumped up to second place while Roy Haslam of Victoria was the benefactor and finished first.

Haslam put it all down to racing luck. His 1978 Camaro didn't perform as well as expected and he would have likely finished fifth if it hadn't been for some opportune spins and Eaton's bump.

Eaton and his crew were so upset after the race that they thought about pulling out of Thursday's program but he still managed to pick up $1,000 and could win $1,300 tonight. Also, pulling out would give Haslam a big edge in the over-all points race.

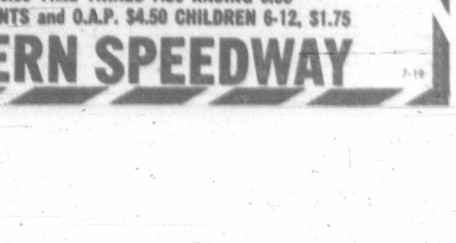

Gates open at 6 tonight, time trials are at 7 and racing is set for 8 o'clock.

AUTO PARTS — Speedway fans are getting together a telegram to send to George Doonan who is in hospital in Spokane. The veteran Surrey driver suffered a broken brack when he crashed in time trials in the IDC opener Friday. The throttle stuck on his new 1977 Ventura and he crashed into the chain-link fencing...A total of 250 signatures, at 25¢ apiece, were garnered Tuesday night and the organizers of the giant telegram are hoping for about 500 in all...Doonan will be flown home by air ambulance later this week. He says he is through driving but Reg Kennedy, also of Surrey, is expected to race the Ventura here tonight...Don Dowdy, NASCAR Northwest points leader, is also expected in tonight...Roy Smith had ignition problems in his new 1978 Camaro Tuesday but it was the car's first run and better things are expected tonight...Victoria's Joe Musfelt is the surprise of the series to date. He had fast time Tuesday, finished fourth in the main event in his 1974 Camaro and is sixth in the point standings.

B.C. Hydro facing another herbicide action

By JACK FOSSUM
Colonist Correspondent

PORT HARDY — B.C. Hydro is facing another appeal against its use of the herbicide 2,4-D along transmission lines.

This time the appeal against a permit allowing use of the chemical comes from a group of concerned citizens on Malcolm Island.

The appeal will be heard in late July or early August, according to group member Nola Miller, who believes the appeal system will be the same as that against the use of the herbicide to combat Eurasian milfoil in Okanagan Lake.

The group is particularly concerned about spraying the chemical in the vicinity of Nimpkish Lake near Woss.

The area is one of 120 acres slated for spraying this year and it is also the area designated for a long-term Salmonid Enhancement Program project initiated by the Nimpkish Indian Band at Alert Bay.

Meanwhile, elsewhere in Campbell Rriver, Hospitality Campbell River, a group set up to promote tourism in the area, has endorsed a study to determine the feasibility of bringing the cruise ship Prince George from Nanaimo to Campbell River for use as a floating convention centre.

At a meeting last week, the group also recommended that the study include a look at the possibility of a land convention site and approved making application for a $13,000 grant under the Canada Works Program to finance the study.

The meeting was told it would cost about $700,000 to purchase and set up the ship as a convention centre or combined hotel-restaurant, and the idea drew mixed reactions from members.

Strong opposition came from chamber of commerce representative Stan Skuse, who said the chamber had voted not to support a floating convention centre scheme.

"It doesn't seem feasible," he said.

In Port Hardy, Tte Port Hardy Golf Society at a recent general meeting received strong public support for a proposed golf course for that community. Almost 40 new applications for membership were received by the organization.

The society, whose main objective is the construction and operation of a nine-hole golf course, is currently considering a site leased by the municipality on a three-year term with and option to renew for 15 years. Both the society and municipal district of Port Hardy are currently investigating the possibility of a longer lease before major capital expenditures are made.

A feasibility study performed by Tattersfield and Associates and Stan Leonard gave a favorable report on the possibility of a nine-hole golf course on the 88 acre site located on the corner of Beaver Harbor Road and B.C. Telephone microwave access road.

And in Port McNeill, Service Office and Retail Workers' Union members at the Canadian Imperial Bank of Commerce have voted overwhelmingly in favor of strike action over lack of a contract with their employer.

Local president Cindy Nicholson said in a press statement that the employees had been granted certification more than a year ago following a six-month wait after application in 1976, and had still not received a contract.

No official strike notice has been given, and a July 23 meeting of the United Bank Workers, a section of SORWUC, will be held to examine some of the workers' decisions.

MONEY HURDLE CLEARED

Cassidy airport still has problems

By DONNA REIMER
Colonist Correspondent

NANAIMO — Money for night lighting at the Cassidy airport has been okayed, but problems still exist with the facility's access road, and the funds for repaving the runway are not yet finalized.

These items were included in the report of city council airport committee chairman Ray Brookbank, presented to aldermen this week.

Ald. Brookbank said that some of the $287,000 being provided by the province for the night lighting project will be used for the relocation of the airport's access road, a project that the province has insisted upon.

However, a letter from airport tenant Pacific Coastal Airlines indicates they are not happy with the proposed relocation.

Pacific Coastal president D. F. McGillivray wrote that his company pays the majority of taxes at the airport, but the new access road will put them on the outside looking in, while AirWest, his competitor, has applied for the lots right next to the proposed access.

But Brookbank told council that the relocation of the access road has been insisted upon by the province and the federal government and he is confident an arrangement can be worked out to satisfy McGillivray.

Brookbank said that no announcement has been made on the federal govenment's involvement in repaving the runway at the airport, but that some $430,000 is needed to repave 3,500 feet of the present runway.

In other business, the council agreed to have its properties committee take a look at the Shell property on Stewart Avenue, site of last September's oil tank farm fire.

The property has been cleared, and Shell will not be allowed to rebuild the tank farm.

The Nanaimo Chamber of Commerce had suggested that the council take a look at buying the property with the idea of a future bridge to Newcastle Island.

While several aldermen agreed they did not like the idea of a bridge to Newcastle Island, the council decided that the city should see if the property is for sale and what uses could be made of it.

Mayor Frak Ney said that he is opposed to any move towards the idea of a bridge to Newcastle.

The island, he said, is a great treasure, one of the last unspoiled Gulf Islands. A bridge would bring dogs, trash, rats and drinking parties, plus increase the fire danger, he said.

The city will ask for bids on its insurance business as well as on appraisal of its property.

The council agreed to ratify a recommendation from the council committee of the whole that the business be put up for bids.

Mayor Ney objected, saying that the appraisals would be a waste of taxpayers money since the insurance on city buildings is blanket coverage to replace any destroyed building.

The city's agent of record system of placing its insurance came under attack recently from one local insurance company.

Under the recommendation passed by council, the agent of record will be asked to bid on the insurance tender call.

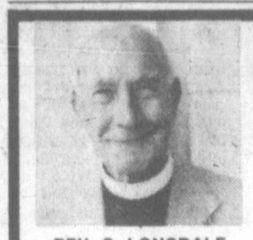

A campaign by local media representatives to have the decision-making portion of the advisory planning commission open to the press was referred by the council to the commission itself for comments.

But Ald. Nelson Allen noted that he was opposed to the move to have that portion of the meeting open because the press tended to seize on certain issues and make them hot, and that they should be content to attend the open portion of the APC meetings instead.

Worker's plunge fatal at Harmac

NANAIMO — David Ashby, 52, of Nanaimo, was killed this week in an industrial accident at the Harmac mill south of here.

RCMP said Ashby broke through the roof of the mud filter building while trying to remove a lime buildup from the roof and fell about eight metres, landing on a concrete floor.

Third party the key no one wants in beer tiff

Canadian Press

Third-party intervention is seen as the key to end the six-week strike-lockout in the B.C. brewery industry, but neither side in the dispute is prepared to request it.

Union business agent John Langley said that while his group would welcome intervention, the union was not prepared to make the first move to untangle the knot which has shut down most of the industry since June 8.

Eric Harris, spokesman for the Brewery Employers Labor Relations Association, which represents the breweries, said the companies didn't seem too interested at present in having a third party on the scene.

Jim Matkin, B.C. deputy labor minister, said Wednesday his department would intervene only if requested by both parties.

Langley said it would likely take such a move to end the standoff in the dispute which had affected 1,200 brewery workers and idled at least 4,000 hotel industry employees.

He said in an interview he wished the provincial government or the B.C. Labor Relations Board would get involved, but that the Canadian Union of United Brewery, Flour, Cereal, Soft Drink and Distillery Workers was not prepared to make a direct request for such intervention.

"Sometimes such a move is taken as a sign of weakness," he said. "But we are certainly not getting any weaker. If anything we are becoming more entrenched."

He said he would have to give some thought as to whether the union would eventually ask for third-party intervention.

"There appears to be some reluctance on the part of the other side to meet," he said.

Harris said the breweries had made two offers to the employees which were said to be final and the companies didn't see any responsibility for initiating additional action.

Four B.C. breweries locked out their employees on June 8 after union members at Carlings in Vancouver went on strike May 26.

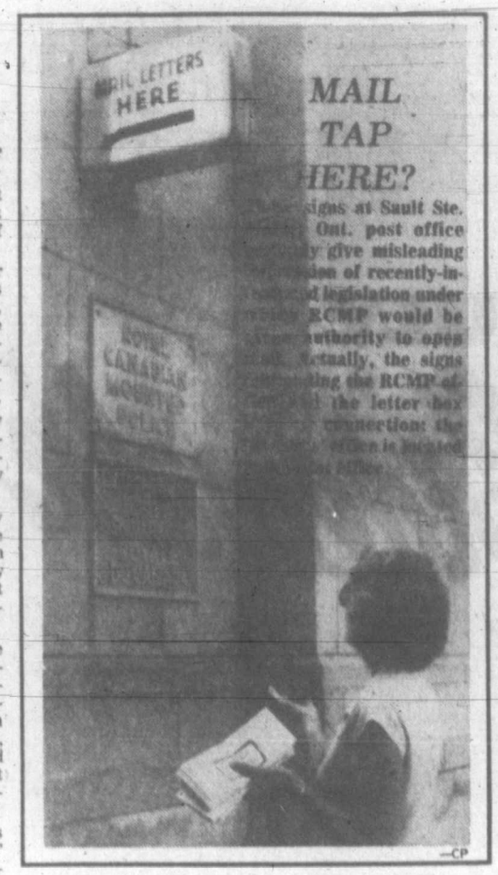

Langley said the breweries' strategy was dictated from Eastern Canada but this was denied by Harris.

"I'm negotiating on behalf of B.C. companies . . . reflecting the B.C. climate and the situation here," Harris said.

Aside from the joint bargaining issue, the union says the major stumbling block in the dispute is the breweries' proposal for a cost-of-living allowance.

The workers want a clause that would give them, on a quarterly basis, an additional cent an hour for every 2-5 of a point the Consumer Price Index increases.

The companies have offered a lump-sum allowance which would be paid in May, 1979, depending on the inflation rate during the previous four months.

Ferry-walkout 32 facing penalties

A spokesman for the B.C. Ferry Corp. said Wednesday the crown corporation was contemplating disciplinary action against workers who walked off the job Monday at Horseshoe Bay terminal in West Vancouver.

Ken Stratford, traffic manager, said in an interview that disciplinary action ranging from reprimands to suspensions could be levied against members of the B.C. Ferry and Marine Workers Union.

Thirty-two workers aboard the Queen of Coquitlam walked off the job leaving passengers stranded for four hours in some cases.

When the ferry finally left for Nanaimo after a meeting between the Labor Relations Board and the union, traffic at the terminal was backed up more than two kilometres.

Union spokesman Bob Peacock said the walkout was to protest months of frustration with management over staffing and safety issues, and management's disregard for workers' complaints.

Stratford said one of the issues that led to the walkout centred on the ventilation system below decks.

The dispute, which was threatening to develop into a full-scale work stoppage, was cooled Tuesday by the Labor Relations Board when the two parties decided to resolve the dispute through grievance procedures without further walkouts.

Don't copy U.S. view on oil use—Gillespie

TORONTO (CP) — Federal Energy Minister Alastair Gillespie said Wednesday Canadians should not adopt the same attitude as Americans who believe the United States has plenty of oil to meet demand.

Many people in the U.S. think their economy is "virtually hemorrhaging from oil, while the fact is that one-half of the oil consumed there is costing them $45 billion a year to import," he said.

"Canadians should also know their oil import bill, while only $3.5 billion a year, is not to be taken lightly and that 70 per cent of the oil ever produced anywhere has been consumed in the last 15 years."

Gillespie told an energy conference sponsored by the Canadian Manufacturers' Association that alternatives must be found.

That is why, he said, the federal government has authorized a $380-million expenditure in the next five years to tap the heating power of the sun and the energy available from garbage and forests in Canada.

Reiterating details of an announcement he made several weeks ago, Gillespie said manufacturers will be encouraged by the government's purchase of their solar-heating systems for new federal buildings.

Meanwhile, a researcher for Imperial Oil Ltd. told the 300 conference delegates the outlook for Canadian oil supply and demand appears more favorable than it did two years ago.

W. A. Bain said there is a good chance that oil needs in Ontario and Western Canada can be met throughout the 1980s, along with "significant volumes to Montreal."

"However, the outlook is heavily dependent on continued exploration success and an early start on new oil sands plants as requirements quickly exceed supply from existing sources."

Bain said Imperial's latest projection is for Canadian oil demand to average 1.9 million barrels a day in the 1980s, about 600,000 barrels a day fewer than it had earlier projected for 1990.

Conventional heavy crude oil supply "is pretty well in balance with normal market opportunities."

"However, because of uncertainties, the least-risk course is to have more rather than less supply."

Ottawa dragging on plans to buy $1.5 billion in ships

OTTAWA (CP) — The federal government is falling behind schedule on the $1.5 billion program to buy new ships for the armed forces.

The project team in charge of the ship program will formally ask competing shipbuilding consortiums Aug. 1 to outline their proposals for building six naval frigates.

This comes more than two months after the original target for issuing the requests for proposals.

But federal officials say they aren't worried yet. They say it's still early in the ship program and they anticipate the ships will be delivered on time. The first one should be delivered in 1985 and the last in 1989.

One informant said the project team allowed for some slack or delays in meeting targets but "the slack that's built into this program is fast being taken up."

Five groups have already indicated they plan to submit proposals for the ship program.

Minority gets voice in merger decision

When two companies, one of which has voting control over the other, decide to amalgamate, minority shareholders seldom if ever get a meaningful voice in the proceedings, short of going to court.

Such a state of corporate affairs, however, gets a unique twist next Thursday in Vancouver. Minority shareholders of Sun Publishing Co. Ltd. will get to decide if that company's proposed amalgamation with F.P. Publications (Western) Ltd. will take place. It likely is the first time that such a procedure has been tried in Canada. (See Page 7.)

Fish unions back on job

VANCOUVER (CP) — A strike that virtually shut down the B.C. fishing industry ended Wednesday when shoreworkers and tendermen voted in favor of a contract offer from the Fisheries Association of B.C.

The workers, members of the United Fishermen and Allied Workers Union, began returning to their jobs immediately.

The 600 tendermen had walked off the job Sunday after rejecting an offer put forward by industry negotiators just prior to a strike deadline. The 4,500 shoreworkers walked out in support of the tendermen.

Fishermen, the third major group represented by the UFAWU, had already accepted minimum salmon prices set by the industry, but were asked last Friday to stop fishing in support of strike action. All fish caught after midnight Friday night were declared "hot" and were not to be processed.

Union negotiators had recommended that the membership accept the latest offer, reached after a lengthy bargaining session that ended early Wednesday morning.

Negotiators had also recommended acceptance of the offer turned down Sunday, primarily because the union was upset with the companies' demand that a single agreement cover tendermen for both the salmon and herring seasons.

Nichol said that issue was resolved when the union agreed that it would not take strike action during the 1979 herring season, at the same time maintaining its right to raise issues relating to conditions in the herring industry.

Any disputes, he said, are to be considered by a joint union-industry committee with any issues unresolved to go to third-party arbitration.

"That basically allows them (tendermen) a second kick at the can," said Nichol. "The companies had wanted to close off that opportunity altogether."

Nichol said the union's desire for separate agreements arises from the difference in conditions for tendermen between the summer salmon season and the winter herring season. Tendermen convey fish between fish boats and processing plants.

Nichol said the tendermen will receive a $9-a-day increase on a basic rate of $103 a day.

He said shoreworkers accepted the companies' offer of a 70-cent-an-hour increase. Under the previous agreement, shoreworkers received $6.72 an hour at base, $7.27 for production workers, $7.59 in cold storage plants and $8.89 for tradesmen.

Bolivia orders voting rerun

LA PAZ, Bolivia (AP) — The National Election Court annulled Bolivia's July 9 presidential election Wednesday night and called for another vote within 180 days.

The court secretary read the decision to reporters while President Hugo Banzer and his cabinet met in the presidential palace. He said the court acted unanimously in reaction "to irregularities all along the process" that was intended to restore civilian government after a dozen years of military rule.

The secretary said the court felt new elections would guarantee an expression of the "popular will."

Gen. Juan Pereda, the military government's hand-picked candidate who was declared the winner of the presidential election, asked the court earlier Wednesday to scrap the results and hold another vote "to avoid sorrow and tears for the nation."

Several opposition candidates already have charged that the military rulers rigged the elections.

Pereda called on God to "save Bolivia from hatred and violence," and said he was sure his proposal would have the full support of the people. Pereda, a former air force commander and interior minister, was declared the winner last week of Bolivia's first presidential election in 12 years. He had 50.13 per cent of the vote—with about 70 per cent counted—when the electoral court stopped giving out results last weekend.

Riot-helmeted armed police watch colleagues chop bails into bite size for incinerator

Closely-watched pot broils away

Members of the RCMP's Emergency Response Team from Victoria, armed with 12-gauge shotguns and semi-automatic rifles, stood guard Wednesday while a huge haul of marijuana was burned in the North Cowichan municipal incinerator.

The marijuana was the 13 tons seized off Tofino earlier this week in a combined police-armed forces operation.

The haul, largest in Canada's history and estimated to be worth $20.8 million, according to RCMP, was burned in the incinerator about three miles northwest of Duncan.

Altogether it took about two hours to burn the confiscated drug, which had to be fed into the incinerator in stages.

About 20 Mounties from Victoria unloaded the packages of marijuana which almost completely filled a tractor-trailer unit.

The Mountie detail was commanded by Victoria Supt. Edward Trefry with S-Sgt. Edward Nedzelski, also of Victoria, as second in command.

The marijuana had been stored at CFB Esquimalt since its seizure Saturday morning.

The seizure of the drug and two vessels took place at Shelter Inlet northwest of Tofino.

Each of the bales burned contained about 60 pounds of marijuana. Two bales were spared from the furnace for use as evidence.

Nedzelski said the North Cowichan incinerator site was chosen because the incinerator is the largest on Vancouver Island. There was little visible smoke from the destruction operation.

Meanwhile, RCMP Supt. Scotty Gardiner denied reports Wednesday that some of the 15 men arrested in the marijuana seizure have been

Language deals for Quebec HQs called ludicrous

MONTREAL (CP) — Companies whose head offices for all of Canada are based in Quebec will be allowed to use English as their working language provided they sign special agreements with the Quebec government, regulations released Wednesday say.

All companies which conduct at least 50 per cent of their business outside Quebec will be eligible for special agreements. Firms with less than 50 per cent of their business outside Quebec are also eligible if they meet certain specified conditions.

Reg Groome, head of the Montreal Board of Trade, reacted angrily Wednesday to the regulations.

In a telephone interview, Groome said it was "naive" and "ludicrous" for the government to expect it could control what language people would do business in.

Groome said the regulations amounted to having companies ask for permission to use English, and would ultimately lead to the departure of more head offices from Montreal.

"You cannot regulate head offices," he said.

"A head office is not a local business and cannot be treated in the same manner. It is flexible in that it can be located anywhere."

Groome said the rules would force businesses that do less than 50 per cent of their business outside the

SMOKE ALARM SHORT CIRCUIT STARTS BLAZE

UPPERCO, Md. (UPI) — Maryland fire authorities said Wednesday a fire in an Upperco home was started by a short circuit in the smoke detector.

"Nobody can believe us when we tell them it happened," said Jane Sievert, whose detector started the small fire on the second floor of her house. "A smoke detector catching fire is like having a fire in an engine house."

Mrs. Sivert said her husband extinguished the fire before any serious damage was caused.

The faulty detectors have been the object of a recall drive by their manufacturer, BRK Electronics of Aurora, Ill., but only slightly more than one-third have been returned.

John Farrell of the state fire marshal's office said the faulty smoke detector had been installed with the "wrong size resistors, which could cause smoke to build up in them."

BRK Electronics said the resistor problem in its 749-series detectors could not only make the devices "inoperative but could cause a fire."

Whites jeer Smith: 'How many to die?'

SALISBURY, Rhodesia (AP) — An all-white audience booed and heckled Prime Minister Ian Smith on Wednesday night when he said he agreed to bring blacks into the government because it was the best deal that could be expected after six years of guerrilla war.

"Rubbish!" some members of the audience shouted. "How many more have to die?" others yelled.

In an interview earlier Wednesday with the South African Press Association, the prime minister urged the United States to lift economic sanctions against Rhodesia as a first step toward ending the guerrilla war.

Smith, who jointly heads a transition government with three black leaders, has promised black majority rule by the beginning of the year. A constitutional accord reached four months ago between black and white leaders guarantees the country's first popular elections in the next few months. But it excluded Patriotic Front guerrilla leaders Joshua Nkomo and Robert Mugabe, who

Colonist news services

MAIDSTONE, England — U.S. State Secretary Cyrus Vance announced Wednesday he will fly to the Middle East in about two weeks in another bid to revive Egyptian-Israeli peace talks after the two sides ended an inconclusive meeting here.

Vance came here hoping Egyptian Foreign Minister Mohammed Ibrahim Kamel and his Israeli counterpart Moshe Dayan could agree on the date and place for a resumption of peace negotiations, broken off by President Anwar Sadat last January after he accused Israel of intransigence.

But two days of talks in ancient Leeds Castle ended Wednesday with no firm agreement on the time or place of future negotiations, and an acknowledgment that major differences still existed between the two sides.

"I anticipate there will be further meetings when I go to the Middle East in about two weeks," Vance told newsmen in a statement, but admitted that a lot of hard work lay ahead.

Kamel was quoted by the semi-official daily newspaper Al-Ahram today as saying Egypt had agreed to resume Middle East peace negotiations after Israel undertook to reconsider Egyptian proposals it had already rejected.

In Jerusalem, Prime Minister Menachem Begin tore up a sheet of paper during an angry parliamentary debate today in a gesture of contempt for the idea of any Israeli withdrawal from the Jordan West Bank.

Waving the paper at Opposition leader Shimon Peres, Begin declared: "Now this is a territorial compromise, one part for you and one part for me. Excuse me."

With that, Begin ripped the paper in two, sending the Knesset into an uproar that lasted nearly 15 minutes.

Meantime, special U.S. envoy Alfred Atherton has been instructed to resume shuttle diplomacy to prepare for further talks.

Vance said he would remain in the Middle East long enough to get talks restarted.

Filed delinquency charge

Vander Zalm critic sacked

VANDERHOOF (CP) — The co-ordinator of an independent community resources society in this central B.C. community was fired Wednesday after he filed charges in provincial court Tuesday that Human Resources Minister William Vander Zalm contributed to juvenile delinquency.

Ed Yorke said he was informed of his dismissal Wednesday after directors of the society met Tuesday night to discuss the case.

Yorke filed charges against Vander Zalm and several others for failing to remove six children from an environment which he said promoted juvenile delinquency.

Yorke said his firing came under threat from the human resources ministry that the society's funding would be cut if he remained in his position.

The society provides special services, including family child care workers, to children and their families.

Both the director and vice-president of the society refused to comment on the firing.

Greeks flee quake city in full moon

SALONICA, Greece (Reuter) — Most of this city's 700,000 residents fled the city Wednesday in fear of an earthquake during tonight's full moon.

A strong tremor in Salonica a month ago—on the eve of a full moon—killed 50 people, injured many others and caused severe damage.

Despite assurances from seismologists that a full moon could have no connection with quakes, the rumor has persisted over the past few days.

Carter drug-abuse adviser admits falsifying prescription

WASHINGTON (AP) — Dr. Peter Bourne, who heads President Carter's fight against drug abuse, was granted a leave of absence Wednesday night after it was learned he wrote a prescription for a controlled drug made out to a fictitious person.

The leave was announced by Carter's spokesman, Jody Powell, after a day of White House delay in reacting to the disclosure that police were investigating the case.

Powell said Bourne requested the leave "to have an opportunity to clear his name."

"This decision was Dr. Bourne's own decision," Powell said. "The president was informed after he had made that decision and, of course, agreed to his request to leave."

Bourne conceded in a statement that he wrote a prescription made out to a fictitious person in order to supply a staff aide with 15 tablets of the much-abused sedative Quaalude.

He said he consulted a lawyer and believes "that what I have done is neither legally nor morally wrong."

Powell said he assumes that Bourne will remain on the White House payroll while on leave.

The situation first came to light in an article published in The Washington Post which said Bourne had written the prescription for Quaalude.

Quaalude is a brand name used by Rogers Inc. for the drug having the chemical name methaqualone. It also is marketed under different names by other firms. Quaalude is classified as a sedative and hypnotic substance, similar in effect but not in chemistry to barbituates. It has been tightly controlled by the federal government since October, 1973, because of widespread abuse.

A spokesman for the U.S. Drug Enforcement Administration said methaqualone is prescribed medically to induce sleep in cases of severe insomnia but is sought by drug abusers for its alleged aphrodisiac effect, as well as its sedative effect.

A court clerk confirmed Wednesday that Toby M. Long of Washington was charged July 11 with "obtaining or attempting to obtain a controlled drug known as Quaalude by fraud, deceit or misrepresentation." Trial has been set for Sept. 19.

The Post said police were treating the arrest as a routine investigation of prescription forgery, a crime that covers any prescription misrepresentation and carries a penalty of one to five years' imprisonment under Virginia law.

The Post said Bourne told investigators the person seeking the drug was a woman who worked in his White House office, but she was not further identified.

Bourne, 38, a psychiatrist by profession, worked as Carter's chief drug-abuse adviser while Carter was governor of Georgia. He now holds a $51,000-a-year job as the president's chief adviser on medical and drug-abuse matters.

Armed forces: Put up or shut down, says MP

Canada's armed forces should be disbanded if badly-needed new armaments are not provided, says Conservative defence critic Allan McKinnon.

Re-equipping the forces is of prime importance and would enhance this country's role in the North Atlantic Treaty Organization, the Victoria MP said in an interview prior to leaving on a tour of Western Canadian Forces bases.

He said Defence Minister Barney Danson has "double-crossed the armed forces and double-crossed me," by secretly reducing promised spending on new armaments.

Danson, he said, had maintained he was keeping a long-standing policy promise of increasing real capital spending on defence by 12 per cent annually.

"However, when I checked recently with the financial department, I was told the real increase this year is only 2.8 per cent, McKinnon said. "I didn't mind him taking bows for decisions that had been made by former defence minister James Richardson as long as the badly-needed new armaments were being acquired—but I won't let him get away with this any longer."

He said Danson's explanation had been that he had a handshake arrangement with Treasury Board chairman Robert Andras to get an extra $60 million in a future year by taking the cut this year.

"Our armed forces personnel are very trusting souls, I doubt many of them realize the budget has been cut back from the amount promised."

Canada is now serving in a reserve role in NATO because "our equipment is not up to snuff," he said.

McKinnon said he receives many complaints about Canada's defence policy. "Many people just want us to be respectable partners to our allies."

Companies battling for the $2.3-billion fighter aircraft contract will get another chance to sweeten their bids, something most of the contenders welcome, he said.

The cabinet decision to give companies extra time to improve their proposals could affect the fighter project timetable "and create money problems for the government later on."

The government is asking the competing firms to supply 130 to 150 fighters for the $2.3 billion in 1977 dollars, but several of the firms have indicated they might not be able to meet that target.

The contending fighters are the Grumman F-14, the McDonnell-Douglas F-15, the General Dynamics F-16, the McDonnell-Douglas and Northrop versions of the F-18 and the Panavia Tornado. Panavia is a British-German-Italian consortium while the other firms are American.

McKinnon said government officials are recommending the three cheapest planes—the F-16 and the two F-18 versions—for the short list.

Several members of the Trudeau cabinet are not in favor of spending money on defence equipment, and nothing would please them more than seeing the issue deferred, he said.

The dilly-dallying by cabinet on the question of new armaments was worrying defence department officials, McKinnon said.

The new Leopard tanks the government is buying from West Germany could cost an extra $50 million because no arrangements were made in the estimates for the fluctuating exchange rate, he charged.

The $50 million figure is based on the dollar staying at the current German mark exchange, he said.

The government announced 18 months ago that it was buying 128 Leopard C-1 tanks for $187 million. Since then the Canadian dollar has fallen in value in comparison to the mark.

"Danson is shaping up as a total disaster as minister," McKinnon said. "He doesn't have the ability to wring things out of cabinet like his predecessor Richardson."

One of Danson's major blunders, he said, was in moving the Canadian Airborne Regiment from Edmonton to Petawawa where there were insufficient facilities.

"I opposed it bitterly. I couldn't see the logic in the move, it was absolutely baffling."

The defence critic also charged that the government's plan to acquire six ships at a cost of about $1.5 billion as a first step in a 20-year fleet replacement program, is already three months behind schedule, although the program only started seven months ago.

He questions many aspects of this program, especially the type of vessels being proposed.

McKinnon said he would like smaller patrol vessels.

He also has serious reservations about Canada's existing anti-submarine warfare program which, he said, is becoming more and more expensive and less and less productive.

Belize sculptor studies Canada for clues

By PAUL DE GROOT
Colonist reporter

Fashioning a distinctive art from a country like Belize is not easy, George Gabb admits.

The national sculptor of the country, better known in Canada as British Honduras, draws inspiration from a nation of 150,000 people who live on a sliver of the Yucatan Peninsula about the size of Vancouver Island.

About 40 per cent are descendants of Africans brought to the colony as slaves by British settlers. Others are Mayans, Caribs, East Indians, Spaniards, and Mestizos.

Many speak a distinctive form of Creole but Belize is the only country in South America where English is the official language.

Gabb himself is Mayan on one side, Negro-Welsh on the other. He is visiting Canada as a participant in an exchange program sponsored by the B.C. Inter-Church Committee on World Development Education.

Because of its history and mixture of races, Belize "doesn't really have a national culture," Gabb said on a visit to Victoria. As one of the country's premier artists, development of a distinctive artistic identity for the country is "my baby," he said.

A large part of his visit to Canada is viewing the work of native artists here.

"I have a lot of Indian in me. I am hoping to be able to be close to them, share with them."

On a visit to the Provincial Museum Wednesday, he spoke with several native Indian artists, and today he heads up-Island to visit native carvers at Koksilah.

"It was the first time I have seen a totem pole outside of a book, and immediately I sensed the spirit of Indian arts from here down to Chile."

Framing the air with his fingers, Gabb said "I took sections of the totem pole. I could see that that was Guatemala. That was Mexico."

Unlike the work going on in Belize, however, where Gabb is attempting to fashion a contemporary art form, native art in Canada appears to aim at "revitalizing an old culture, rather than creating a new expression of Indians living in this time and age."

"They are not thinking of the individual offering of the artist to society, but seem to be more concerned about mastering the old art, bringing out what has been stifled."

"I would have expected to see more creativity."

Nevertheless, the art of the native Indian probably serves an important function in a native society which has experienced great pressures from the modern age, Gabb admitted.

In Belize, by contrast, Gabb's aim is to "create an identity in sculpture different from anything else in America or Europe."

As Gabb describes the quest for a unique artistic expression owing a debt to none other in a poem called Ethnic Soul Song, written, as are many of his poems, to develop inspiration for a sculpture (in this case he liked the poem so well he didn't do the sculpture):

So stretch your hand afar
that this gift may afar be given.
give it to the wind, share it with everything.
and, greater still, you must live
this song until it may be seen
no fancy thought, no rhythmic sound
no lover's quest, no king's command.

Allan wows and warns chamber

By HUBERT BEYER
Colonist reporter

For a guy who compared himself to Zsa Zsa Gabor's sixth husband ("I know what to do, but I don't know if I can make it interesting"), Allan Fotheringham showed a remarkable oratorial talent at the Victoria Chamber of Commerce's noon luncheon Wednesday.

The Vancouver Sun's controversial columnist, some of whose enemies refer to him as the Sun's best fiction writer, had been invited to speak to the chamber at its monthly meeting in the Empress Hotel.

Fotheringham got more laughs than Gerry Gosley got for his jokes during a brief entertainment session at which the audience was treated to excerpts from the Smile Show.

But his humor didn't take anything away from the devastation of his attack on provincial and federal politicians.

Some examples:

● The difference between William Bennett and W.A.C Bennett is that "Bill takes the ferry when he comes to Victoria, his father used to walk."

● The provincial cabinet is considering a plan to put the whole province on a "two-year, 25,000-mile warranty."

● Travel Minister Grace McCarthy has a hard time coordinating the "rapidly-shrinking tall ships."

● Human Resources Minister William Vander Zalm had a fire recently at his house, during which his whole library was destroyed. "Both books were burnt and he hadn't even finished coloring one of them."

● Education Minister Patrick McGeer is so brilliant he can talk himself into any stupid idea.

● Prime Minister Trudeau is a "legend in his own mind."

But Fotheringham didn't devote his entire speech to a sardonic assessment of politicians. In a more serious vein, he predicted that the New Democratic Party would be back in power. It was only a matter of time.

Despite being beaten in the last election, the NDP had retained roughly 40 per cent of the popular vote, and if Progressive Conservative Leader Vic Stephens could draw some of the more right-wing elements from the Socreds, the NDP would be back in, he said.

On the national scene, Fotheringham warned that Anglo-Canadians were falling for a carefully orchestrated lie that the leading figures in the Parti Quebecois are a bunch of wild and uneducated men, bent on destroying Canada.

He said the PQ cabinet consisted of an intelligentsia which was largely educated outside Canada.

Collectively, the Quebec cabinet towered over any other cabinet in Canada, he said.

He said it was tragic that the separation issue was being decided by two men (Rene Levesque and Trudeau) who had been antagonists for decades.

But he speculated that in the end, Canada was larger than both and would survive them both.

Shell deflates recall link in steel-belted confusion

The recent massive recall of Firestone 500 radial tires in the United States has created some confusion in the minds of Shell Canada Ltd. customers. Firestone manufactures a similar tire for Shell in the United States which is sold only there as the Shell steel-belted X-100.

Shell Canada outlets, according to Miles Primrose, proprietor of Gordon Head Shell, sell a steel-belted X-100 tire, but it and other tires made for Shell Canada are made by Uniroyal, and not Firestone.

Primrose said that some of his customers had expressed concern about potential defects in their automobile tires and he said that their concerns were unfounded.

Industrial park soon—mayor

Barring unforeseen developments, Saanich Mayor Mel Couvelier is confident the municipality will have an industrial park before this November's municipal election.

"It should not become an election issue, the matter should be well in hand a long time before nomination day," he said in an interview.

Couvelier earlier this week made public details of council's plan to develop industrially about 80 acres of land flanking Interurban Road, just south of the Camosun College campus.

The land under option to Saanich totals 141 acres but only 80 acres are considered suitable for industrial development.

Couvelier expected opposition to the land banking scheme from proponenents of the Royal Oak industrial park proposal—a plan which died earlier this year when Couvelier broke a 4-4 deadlock and voted against rezoning the 100-acre site.

"The property owners may decide to wait until this year's election to see whether any radical changes occur in the council makeup," he said. "But it's my feeling the destiny of the Royal Oak site will be decided early next year."

Municipal staff are preparing an impact study which will assess a broad variety of factors, including the impact of the industrial park on the Interurban area, and its effect on the surrounding rural area, the floodplain and traffic patterns.

The land on which options are held is a combination of private and public ownership, in two tracts on the east and west sides of the road.

50 'derailed' from E&N

A minimum of 50 passengers were turned away from the Esquimalt and Nanaimo Railway passenger service Wednesday.

John Cooper, an E & N employee who is chairman of the E & N employees committee to save the service, said on his return from riding the train north to Parksville and back that possibly as many more also wanted to make the trip Wednesday but couldn't.

"A statement attributed to Don Collings, the CPR traffic chairman, that only between three and 10 people were being turned away, is all wet," Cooper said.

HE SAID HE had in his possession 50 cards signed by disappointed would-be passengers collected on Wednesday alone.

The cards will be sent to David Jones, chairman of the Canadian Transport Committee review committee, which will decide the fate of the service Dec. 13.

"Today there were enough passengers to fill two cars, although there was only one," he said.

"The ludicrous part about it is that the CPR put on a second man. What we need is more seats, not more employees," he added.

COOPER SAID about 25 people were permitted to ride the Dayliner while standing Wednesday. It carried a total of 230 passengers on the two-way trip.

He charged the CPR has "monitored the service to death" and added that it wasn't living up to its obligation to provide adequate passenger service.

A meeting of the Vancouver Island Committee to Save the E & N will be held tonight at Duncan city hall at 8 , to which the interested public is invited.

Pierre Berton, broadcaster and author of two novels about the CPR, may come to the aid of the endangered E & N Dayliner.

If he does, it will be largely due to the efforts of John Cooper of Victoria, E & N employee and member of the United Transportation Union. Cooper told a meeting of the Committee to Save the E & N in Duncan that he had sent a telegram to Berton to ask for his assistance.

Cooper said he hoped to get Berton to come to the Island to participate in the 92nd anniversary of the driving of the last spike on the E & N.

Committee members also hope to run a special excursion from Victoria to Duncan Aug. 13, using a steam engine and rolling stock from the Mainland. Aug. 13 is the anniversary of the start of the passenger service.

THE TRAIN would stop at Cliffside near Shawnigan Lake to relive the historic spike-driving exploits of former prime minister Sir John A. Macdonald 92 years previously.

Following the ceremony, the engine would steam the remaining 20 kilometres into Duncan where picnic-style festivities would be provided.

Cooper said the committee planned to approach Premier Bennett and Tourism Minister Grace McCarthy to help get the steam train over to Vancouver Island.

He said the steam train journey would be the start of the committee's push to reinstate Sunday passenger service on the Dayliner.

COOPER SAID he thought the recent train ride by Bennett and members of his cabinet was successful.

Cooper said his union had been recently successful in getting the Dayliner to run on time and there had been a reduction in fares.

The next step, he said, included getting the Victoria terminal back to the downtown area and away from the current Esquimalt station and resumption of Sunday service.

"The car has got to go back across the bridge to Victoria, that's where it all started. The Victoria station is only four or five minutes' walk from all the tourist hotels," Cooper said.

A MAJOR PUSH is also under way to promote and publicize the Dayliner service in the Seattle area, said another committee member, Victoria advertising manager Rick Trueman.

Trueman said this would be tied in with the sailing from Seattle of the Princess Marguerite. He said that half the remaining advertising budget for the Marguerite was being devoted to the idea of taking the Dayliner up-Island.

He also announced that a dairy firm which had committed itself to $10,000 worth of advertising promoting the Dayliner, would also be printing a poster to be displayed in retail stores urging people to use the train.

The committee also intends to get petitions signed opposing the proposed cancellation of passenger service.

Cruiser remains

Burnt and grounded hulk is all that is left of what was a 28-foot Tolleycraft until about 4 p.m. Wednesday. Owned by J.C. Hamilton of 9588 Ardmore Drive, it was having engine problems. When the engine was turned off, the rear of the boat exploded into flames near Bosun's Marina at Sidney. Hamilton and his wife headed for the water and were picked up by a dinghy from a passing sailboat.
